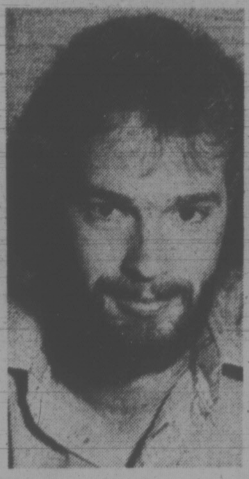
Man Saved In Dramatic City Rescue



STEEDS
. . . grabbed old man

An elderly man is alive today as a result of a dramatic rescue early this morning by a passenger in a taxi.

William Sutherland, believed in his 80s, was taken from his third-floor room in the Fairfield Hotel, 710 Cormorant, by Wayne Steeds, 21, of 784 West Gorge, after Steeds entered Sutherland's burning room.

Steeds said today he had called a cab while on the 900-block Douglas and had planned to go to a restaurant.

Steeds said that within moments of getting in a Bluebird cab, taxi driver Don Marnell spotted flames in one of the hotel's windows.

Marnell radioed for the fire department.

The pair continued down Douglas to the restaurant, then Steeds said: "We better turn around and see if we can do something back there.

"When we got back we both jumped out of the car, then Don boosted me up the fire escape and I climbed to the top."

Steeds kicked in a window.

"The smoke was really heavy and I couldn't breathe, so I backed off."

After being on the balcony for about 30 seconds, Steeds "just took a breath and went in."

He noticed a man standing in a corner, and "just grabbed him and threw him and myself out the door."

After telling Sutherland to go downstairs, Steeds set off the fire alarm, found an extinguisher, kicked down the door which had locked, and re-entered the room.

He used the extinguisher on an old cushion chair.

The flames were on the chair, walls and curtain.

Fire Insp. Alex Satchwell said Steeds saved Sutherland's life. Sutherland was unharmed.

Damage was estimated at $1,500 to the room and furniture.

After the fire was over Steeds went back to the restaurant and finally had something to eat.

Strike Restricts Hospital

KELOWNA (CP) — A study session by 288 members of the British Columbia Hospital Employees' Union at Kelowna General Hospital today effectively shut down most hospital services.

Union members walked off their jobs at 10:20 a.m. protesting what they say is an assault on one of their members by a hospital supervisor several weeks ago. No reason was given for the incident.

Ray McCready, BCHEU Okanagan-Kootenay regional servicing representative, said the unidentified union member required hospital treatment after being assaulted by an unnamed hospital supervisor.

Hospital administrator Colin Elliott said he will seek a court injunction ordering the union members back to work. He said the action by the BCHEU is illegal under the terms of the existing contract.

He immediately ordered restrictions on all surgery, cutting back on admissions except in emergency cases, and the release of patients who no longer required total hospital care.

He added that the dispute is a matter which should be handled through arbitration.

4-MONTH LOW FOR GOLD

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Gold dropped to its lowest level in four months on London bullion exchanges today.

It started the day at $154 an ounce but declined slowly to a price of $151.75 at the afternoon official fixing, passing Wednesday's closing of $152.75.

Arts Dean President

VANCOUVER (CP) — Douglas Kenny, 51, dean of arts at the Uniiversity of British Columbia, was appointed Wednesday to succeed retiring UBC president Walter Gage, 69.

Gage retires in July, 1975, after six years as president.

Kenny was picked by the UBC board of governors after three weeks' deliberation, from a list of candidates submitted by student-faculty committees.

He has signed a five-year contract at $60,000 a year.

A teacher at UBC since 1950, Kenny began his bachelor of arts degree at Victoria College in 1941 and completed it at UBC in 1945. He received a master's degree in psychology from UBC in 1947, and in 1952, was awarded a doctorate by the University of Washington while lecturing at UBC.

Teacher Ends 2-Week Vigil

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Teacher Ingrid Blanchet broke her fast and her two-week vigil on the legislature steps Wednesday night and today claimed a partial victory in her protest of bureaucracy and school board hiring practices.

Before leaving for her home in West Vancouver this morning, the 52-year-old kindergarten-primary teacher issued a typed statement saying Education Minister Eileen Dailly and B.C. Teachers' Federation president Jim McFarlan would look into her complaints.

"I feel I have accomplished something at least," she said.

The teacher completed her 14th day of protest on the steps of the legislature Wednesday and left at about 10 p.m. She claimed she had been discriminated against by school boards seeking kindergarten teachers while unwilling to pay the premium salaries required by high qualifications.

Mrs. Blanchet still has no offers of a teaching post in September and is considering returning to her last post in Prince Rupert which, she said, caused her mental anguish due to poor conditions.

"She mentioned she might have to go back," said her son Ian in West Vancouver, who expected his mother home this afternoon.

The teacher received a telegram from the Prince Rupert school board Tuesday instructing her to return or face action for breach of contract.

According to Mrs. Blanchet, she has a right to demand an inquiry by the BCTF into her allegations about hiring practices, but despite the implied assurance from McFarlan, she said in her statement: "I have had no success in being granted an inquiry into what I have stated was unethical practice having to do with tampering of principal's report on myself by a member of the Vancouver school board in 1972 when I resigned from that board."

'Common Destiny' For NATO

OTTAWA (WP) — The United States and its North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies — including France — Wednesday closed a stormy period in their postwar relations by adopting a 14-point declaration asserting their "common destiny."

U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, who set in motion a European-American dialolgue in April 1973, said the U.S. was "satisfied" with the outcome. At an Ottawa press conference, Kissinger said that President Nixon would sign the declaration with other heads of government in Brussels next Wednesday in order to give it "an adequate solemnity."

The declaration itself was a comprise which fell short of Kissinger's proposed "new Atlantic Charter." But many here were pleased that any document was adopted at all given the angry conflicts that have married Atlantic unity since the Middle East war.

Many top NATO officials were ebullient after two days of discussions.

There were strong signs that the meeting had produced a new harmony between the Europeans and Americans on futher steps in the Middle East and in the

Fraser Flooding Near Emergency

By the Canadian Press

The Fraser River continued to rise Wednesday after increasing more than a foot since Tuesday, triggering emergency procedures in the lower mainland and Fraser Valley.

Flood reading was 21.04 feet above sea level at Mission Wednesday, up from 19.89 feet Tuesday.

Dike patrols began on both sides of the river and Chilliwack epened an emergency operations room.

Further measures will begin when the river tops 22 feet.

Several thousand acres of prime farm land and grazing land was under water at Clearwater, about 75 miles north of Kamloops, after the North Thompson River flooded its banks.

Most cattle were able to move to higher ground, but there were scattered areas where groups of cattle were marooned on small islands.

There were no evacuations, although some children had to be taken by boat to catch a morning school bus.

The Fraser continued to rise at Prince George, and water resource experts there predicted the river would continue to rise for another week before peaking for the year.

This means levels at Mission may increase for the next 10 days, although cooler weather predicted to arrive in two days in southern B.C. could slow runoff.

A major problem will come during the weekend when the coast is hit by tides of up to 15.6 feet. The tides, particularly if accompanied by westerly winds, can affect the Fraser River nearly as far as Chilliwack.

HYDRO GETS STRIKE NOTICE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Seventy-two-hour strike notice was served Wednesday on British Columbia Hydro by the Office and Technical Employees Union, Local 378, representing more than 2,300 whitecollar employees.

Union president Fred Trotter said the OTEU "is hopeful both parties will recognize their responsibility to the public and make every effort to arrive at a satisfactory agreement within the next 14 days."

10-Pact Tie-Up Nearing End

Tentative agreement was reached by negotiators for B.C. contractors and a major bloc of unions early today.

The policy conference of the 10-pact group of unions which bargain jointly was meeting this afternoon in Vancouver and was expected to recommend acceptance to union members.

Ratification votes would likely take a week to be completed.

Locals of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners on Vancouver Island will vote on the policy conference's recommendation Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, said John Schibli, president of Victoria Local 1598.

The Victoria local of the carpenters union will meet Wednesday at 4:30 p.m. in the Union Centre, he said.

Cy Stairs, chief negotiator for the 10-pact, said nothing was signed but "there should be no problem."

Chuck Connaghan, president of Construction Labor Relations Association, representing 850 contractors, said there was "some movement" in the industry's last offer but he would not elaborate.

CIRA's last offer called for a wage and fringe benefit increase of $2.90 an hour in a two-year contract with 85 cents an hour as the first increment.

But a major point of contention was the 10-pact's proposal for a cost-of-living clause. CIRA had said the package offer was a sufficient hedge against inflation.

Six other unions bargaining with CIRA but separately from the 10-pact have reached settlements which include the $2.90 package and either $1 or $1.10 an hour as the first increment and a contract reopener after one year on the cost of living.

Only unions outside the 10-pact still to need agreements are the Vancouver and Kamloops locals of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the boilermakers union. The glaziers union is voting on a settlement now.

Vancouver electrical workers began a strike May 1 and the 10-pact followed a week later. Selective striking has occurred elsewhere in the province, including three Victoria building sites.

The 10-pact unions include carpenters and piledrivers, cement masons and plasterers, laborers, sheet metal workers and roofers, machinists, insulators, culinary workers, operating engineers, bricklayers, and painters.

IWA STILL PONDERING

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

Negotiators for the International Woodworkers of America failed Wednesday to reach agreement on whether to recommend acceptance or rejection of a contract offer the industry has termed "final."

Today, 48 hours after the offer was made, there was still no word from the IWA's coast negotiating committee, which was meeting in a Vancouver Hotel.

Although IWA regional president Jack Munro, chairman of the negotiating committee, called the offer "terrific," it was apparent that opinion was not shared by everyone.

The union called leaders of the nine coast locals to Vancouver to go over the contract offer with them and there was speculation the negotiating committee might approach Forest Industrial Relations, the industry's bargaining agency, to discuss 36 items.

The committee's dilemma grew from FIR's negotiating tactics, in which seven successive proposals were made, each one just a little bit better than the last one.

As one observer put it: "It's too much to turn down and not enough to accept. But how much more is there? And if we go out, it's going to be a real war."

Already, contrary to official

Caouette Cold On Controls

The Canadian Press

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette vowed Wednesday to vote against price and wage controls if the Progressive Conservatives are elected and his party holds the balance of power in Parliament after the July 8 election.

Caouette told reporters in Chicoutimi, Que., that controls will not stop inflation and Social Credit MPs will oppose any attempt to implement them.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield has called for a maximum 90-day freeze of prices and wages followed by 18 months to two years of lesser controls.

Details of the second phase of the plan would be worked out in consultation with industry, labor and business during the period when the freeze was in effect.

Caouette repeated his call for a 25-per-cent discount on all retail prices. Such a program could be financed by the Bank of Canada with subsidies paid to retailers. Retail prices would fall accordingly and consumer purchasing power would rise, he argued.

Stanfield, at a rally in Cranbrook, reiterated that controls are needed to break what he calls an inflation psychosis among Canadians.

In his remarks to the open-air crowd of about 300, he criticized resource industry taxation proposals announced in the defeated Liberal budget. If implemented, the tax changes would be bad for federalism because they would strain federal-provincial relations and leave resource industries caught in the crossfire, he said.

Later, at an outdoor evening rally in Calgary, Stanfield attacked the minority Liberal government for its handling of federal-provincial energy negotiatiions.

For months, he said, Prime Minister Trudeau followed a policy of confrontation with oil-producing provinces. He gave Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed a large measure of credit for the national oil-price agreement that was negotiated in March by Trudeau and provincial premiers.

The prime minister has cited the agreement repeatedly during the campaign as an example of strong leadership by his government.

David Lewis, New Democratic Party leader, campaigned Wednesday in Winnipeg where he defended his own anti-inflation policies at a news conference.

He said the NDP proposal of a two-price system for basic Canadian-produced commodities — one price at home and a higher price for exports — would give the consumers a much-needed break.

Canadians now are being hurt unfairly by inflated world prices because some companies are telling consumers to pay the higher international price or do without, he said.

Lewis said the two-price system, already in effect on wheat and oil, should be broadened to include lumber, steel, natural gas, fertilizer, newsprint and salmon.

Mine Men Here To Blast Bill 31

Prospectors, geologists and mining engineers arrived in Victoria today for the first stage of a hoped-for massive two-day demonstration against the Mineral Royalties Act.

Their arrival follows closely on the heels of the final debate of the bill in the legislature.

Bill 31 passed through committee stage approval late Wednesday afternoon, and with the last major legislative hurdle completed MLAs will likely give it official third reading approval today without further discussion.

Outside the legislature this morning security guards cleared the front driveway in expectation of the protesters while organizers for the demonstration were surveying the area.

Save Our Jobs Committee spokesman Bill Slewridge, a former mining union organizer and a member of the Majority Movement, said

Company Profits Climb 45.7%

OTTAWA (CP) — Industrial corporation profits after taxes climbed 45.7 per cent in the first quarter of 1974, substantially above totals recorded in the similar period for 1973, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

Combined with a rise in sales of 24 per cent, the figures indicate a significant average increase in profit margins of the companies.

The Statistics Canada figures show that actual estimated after-tax profits were $2.164 billion — an increase of $679 million over the first three months of 1973.

Sales during the first three months of 1974 jumped to a total of $41.8 billion, up $8.1 billion over the same period for 1973.

Similar figures for the first quarter of 1973 showed that corporate profits increased by 34 per cent over the first quarter of 1972. Profits for the first three months last year increased 53 per cent over the last quarter of 1972.

The rapid rise in corporate profits last year drew strong criticism from New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis and from labor unions. The new figures could revive that criticism, particularly in view of the federal election.

Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, campaigning in Winnipeg, said the figures indicated that "the atmosphere is appropriate for the period of controls we've been urging.

"These profit figures clearly indicate business is in a position to aborb increased costs during the freeze period we have in mind."

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Herb Gray had no comment on the figures as he entered a cabinet meeting today.

"Have you tried Mr. Turner," he said, referring to Finance Minister John Turner. Mr. Turner was not at the meeting.

The recent increases in profits came after a seven-per-cent decline in 1970 but industry has since made a strong recovery in its profit levels while expanding production.

Assets of the companies climbed to a total of about $120 billion, up 14.5 per cent over the same period in 1973.

U.S. Threatens 'Drastic Action' If Canadian Beef Curbs Remain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz said today he is "prepared to recommend more drastic action" if the Canadian government does not reopen its markets to United States beef.

"We have retaliatory action we can take," Butz told the House of Representatives agriculture committee at a hearing into the distressed U.S. livestock situation.

He said he understands the Canadian cabinet is to discuss the situation at a meeting this afternoon.

In Ottawa, government spokesman said today they found it difficult to believe Butz' threat to take drastic action unless Canada drops an alleged ban on beef imports.

"In the first place," a spokesman said, "there is no ban on beef imports."

Two months ago, when the U.S. government lifted a ban on feeding the controversial growth hormone diethylstilbestrol (DES) to cattle, Canada responded by closing its borders to U.S. beef imports, amounting to some $140 million annually. Butz has said for a week that agreement on reopening the Canadian border is near.

The problem, the secretary said, is whether the Canadian government will accept his proposal that farmers certify that their cattle destined for Canada have not received DES, with a veterinarian certifying the meat at the slaughter house.

Butz said that Canada will agree.

In a move to head off increasing congressional and cattle-industry pressure for mandatory beef-import quotas, Deputy Assistant Secretary Richard Bell leaves today for a one-week trip to major exporting countries.

Bell will go to New Zealand, Australia and Japan to seek estimates of their probable shipments to the U.S. and to warn them that Butz does not want to see "the United States remain as the residual dumping grounds" for world beef.

However, the secretary said he expects that after Bell reports back, department economists will still project a probable level of imports just below last year's 1.35 billion pounds. Butz cautioned, however, that in dealing with the international trade question "we must be careful we don't invite severe retaliation" and thwart U.S. efforts to lower farm-trade barriers.

next phase of East-West negotiations.

This, in turn, opened the prospect of some movement at the coming Soviet-American Moscow summit meeting at which one issue will be the stalled progress toward a 35-nation European security conference.

U.S. officials said Kissinger would visit Brussels, Paris and London after the summit, to brief the allies and discuss the advisability of holding the big East-West summit meeting later this year. French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing announced Kissinger's Paris stopover, early in July.

Before the meeting in Ottawa, European officials said they were worried that President Nixon, under the influence of impeachment pressures, might consent to the meeting of the 35 nations without first obtaining the concessions from the Soviet Union that the Europeans want.

A communique issued Wednesday said the allies agreed that the conference would only take place after preliminary negotiations, now being held in Geneva, had produced "results acceptable to all participating states."

Kissinger said he had proposed here that the NATO countries agree what concessions they deem essential before going forward with the European conference.

Another apparent area of allied agreement was the Middle East. The nine-member European Common Market had infuriated Kissinger earlier this year by seeking separate bilateral deals with the Arab countries bartering European goods and technology for Arab oil and gas.

British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan told reporters here that the Europeans now understand American concerns. Officials said the effect of this was that the Europeans had agreed to give the Americans the political and peacemaking lead in the Middle East in exchange for U.S. approval of European economic deals in the area.

NIXON DID IT

BOSTON (AP) — Convicted Watergate burglar James McCord says President Nixon authorized the burglary and set it in motion.

McCord, in one of his first public statements since Watergate Judge John Sirica lifted a ban on his public appearances, said today that the president "authorized the operation either with a nod of his head or in some other way."

"I don't know if it was originally his idea. There's general agreement that it started with Gordon Liddy. It was probably taken up by former attorney-general John Mitchell and the president set it in motion in one form or another."

McCord was in Boston to appear on a television program and promote his new book on Watergate. He said he is appealing his sentence of one to seven years for the Watergate burglary on the basis of alleged government illegalities during his trial.

union policy, close to half the 32,000 loggers and millworkers have stopped work, including nearly all the 14,000 IWA members on Vancouver Island.

The IWA appealed to everyone to stay at work while negotiations continued but the members decided progress was too slow and followed the tradition of "no contract, no work."

The last contract expired last Friday midnight. The industry's "final" offer Tuesday was for a 12 per cent pay raise, with a minimum increase of 65 cents an hour,in a one-year contract plus a cost-of-living clause, a number of job rate revisions and fringe benefits including a dental plan.

Present wages range from $4.45 an hour for laborers to $7 an hour for head sawyers.

The IWA wanted a flat $1 across the board, job rate revisions and a better cost-of-living clause than proposed by FIR.

Munro issued a statement saying the offer is "a complex proposal for the committee to study and contained in the package are a number of items which are completely new and unique in the forest industry, things we have never had to worry about before.

"We know our membership and the public in general are anxious for a recommendation but we are not making a recommendation until the entire package has been thoroughly studied."

Labor Brass Huddles To Assess U.K. Crisis

Times News Services

LONDON — Prime Minister Harold Wilson summoned top advisers to his No. 10 Downing Street residence today to assess the political crisis brought by the first major parliamentary defeat of his 15 week-old minority government Wednesday night.

The defeat touched off pandemonium in the House of Commons and demands for a new general election. British newspapers today reported "election fever" among members of Parliament, but said Wilson was likely to wait until after two more crucial votes tonight before deciding whether to call new general elections.

The opposition Conservative party, joined by the Liberal and Nationalist parties, outvoted the government 308 to 299 Wednesday on a controversial proposal to grant favored tax treatment to Britain's militant trade unions.

The defeat was the first on a major issue for Labor since it formed a minority government after the Feb. 28 elections that saw former Conservative prime minister Edward Heath turned out of power. Had Wilson lost on a formal vote of confidence he would have been obliged to resign.

A government spokesman said Wilson would review the over-all situation at today's meeting with cabinet members.

Heath forecast trouble for the government last week when he declared an end to what he called the "phony war" situation he said had existed in Parliament since the inconclusive February poll.

Until then, opposition leaders had avoided a parliamentary showdown for fear that Wilson might call immediate new elections that the Conservatives were uncertain of winning.

Parliamentary sources said Wilson might be forced to the polls if the government is defeated again tonight on two more bills — one on plans for nationalization of industry and the other on proposed increases on the cost of off-peak hour electricity.

Hundreds more are expected Friday morning, he said, when miners from across the province arrived by chartered aircraft, car pools and buses.

Brian Tracy, executive director of the Majority Movement, said his organization helped to organize the miners and sent out invitations to the rally to about 30,000 people.

The spokesman said the committee has raised enough money to pay the expenses of the demonstrators as well as the extensive anti-Bill 31 advertising program.

While the men would not say how much the committee has raised, they estimated travelling expenses alone would total $43,000.

Several prospectors plan to speak at today's rally and it was expected opposition MLAs may appear during the afternoon while the house is sitting.

Slewridge said the demonstration was organized by the "producers, not the seducers." He said mining companies have not supported the miners in their protests."

In the house last night government members pounded their desks in delight while opposition members sat in stony silence as the house completed committee stage reading of the Bill.

The controversial act passed through final clause-by-clause reading after nearly five hours of debate dominated by Liberal mining critic Gordon Gibson. (North Vancouver-Capilano).

also show an increase in company assets of 3.8 per cent over the final quarter of last year.

The after-tax profits for the first quarter of this year show increases in net earnings that are 79 per cent above those in 1972 and 148 per cent above those in 1971.

The government survey includes companies in mining, manufacturing, transportation and service industries.

Those companies have paid cash dividends of $590 million in the first quarter of the year, indicating that much of the profits have been plowed into corporation investments, including capital.

In the manufacturing sector, dividends paid out by the companies dropped to $292 million from $308 million in the first quarter of 1973.

At the same time, after-tax profits in that sector climbed 62.7 per cent — a total of $1.15 billion.

The manufacturing industry, given recent tax cuts by the Liberal government, also showed sales increases of 22.5 per cent — less than the average.

The lower average sales, coupled with higher-than-average after-tax profits, indicate that manufacturing corporations had a greater-than-average increase in profit margins.

In 1971, the manufacturing sector made relatively-low profits of $377 million. Since then the profit has tripled.

In the food and beverage industries, after-tax profits climbed by 7.1 per cent in the first quarter of 1974 to a total of $90 million; petroleum and coal product industries made profits of $212 million, up 76.7 per cent; and mining profits totalled $435 million, up 51.6 per cent.

Transportation industries, however, reported a drop in profits of $66 million, down from $378 million in the first quarter of 1973. Wood industries made $47 million, down two per cent.

Lewis and pilot examine damaged plane

CYLINDER BLOWS ON DAISY AIR

BY ANDRE OUIMET

Special to the Times

WINNIPEG — Daisy Air, the antiquated, propeller-driven airplane chartered to carry NDP leader David Lewis for the latter part of his campaign, wilted and died here yesterday, temporarily bringing the campaign to a halt.

The Convair 442, whose real name is Bum Air II in memory of a similar, dilapidated aircraft Lewis chartered in the 1972 campaign, "blew a cylinder," as its captain put it, stranding a number of accompanying newsmen and NDP staff here for the night.

A meeting in The Pas was cancelled and arrangements were made to have Lewis and a small pool of group reporters proceed to a public meeting in Thompson.

To make matters worse, there is a telephone operators' strike in Manitoba and a number of newsmen trying to get stories on Bum Air II's predicament to their head offices could not get long distance lines.

And there is a brewery workers strike as well, so that they could not cry in their beer, it having become a scarce commodity.

The province of Manitoba is run by an NDP government, and Lewis is fond of saying in his speeches that Canadians should look to the Manitoba accomplishments and see how well the party would run the federal government.

Lewis' campaign so far has been filled with instances similar to yesterday's, and Bum Air II's sudden illness could not be blamed on anyone.

But NDP organizers, who are running the campaign on a shoestring, did choose to charter an old aircraft from an obscure airline based in Sarnia, Ont. in a typical attempt to try to save money, but in the wrong fashion.

The price of chartering the aircraft is really paid by accompanying newsmen — who now number over 30 — who's organizations are charged $1,200 a seat for three weeks on Bum Air II.

Nobody in the NDP national organization apparently realized that the same number of newsmen would be accompanying Lewis no matter what the price and a slightly higher fee would have provided the NDP leader with a much better — and certainly faster — mode of transportaion.

Bennett 'Only Barrier' To Unity Party in B.C.

Conservative leader Scott Wallace Wednesday labelled Opposition Leader Bill Bennett the only obstacle to formation of an opposition unity party in B.C.

But Bennett denied today that he has been an obstacle to unification of the free enterprise vote in B.C.

Wallace said "several" Social Credit MLAs have expressed an interest in forming a new party but the move has been blocked by the "rigid and self-interested, fixed position taken by Bill Bennett."

"If the NDP government is re-elected because a unity party has not been formed, the responsibility rests fairly and squarely on the shoulders of Bill Bennett," he said.

In a prepared text for delivery to Courtenay Kinsmen Club, Wallace said every opposition MLA "has been receiving a tremendous amount of mail, telephone calls and other contact from citizens imploring the opposition MLAs to join together to form a new political party."

Wallace said Bennett has stated over and over that his concept of a united party is to have Liberals and Conservatives join the Social Credit party.

That position shows Bennett is either very naive or very arrogant, said Wallace.

"The only conclusion one can come to is that he is extremely arrogant and this, of course, is a quality which was well displayed by his father over a period of many years as premier of the province," he said.

"His arrogance towards the voters is matched only by his contempt for the legislature.

"I refer specifically to the fact that in the last two or three weeks he has scarcely appeared in the legislature despite the fact that the house has been debating a large number of very important bills . . ." said Wallace.

Several Social Credit MLAs have expressed a willingness to become part of a united party, he said, but "the Bennett name, the Bennett power, and the influence of all the old guard in the Social Credit party have all been brought to bear on those Social Credit MLAs."

Bennett said ever since his election in south Okanagan he has been campaigning for unity in the province but he believes new parties and coalitions will not work.

Bennett held a special press conference this morning to respond to the Wallace charges. Other Social Credit MLAs also denied they have expressed any willingness to form a new unity party.

They accused Conservative leader Scott Wallace of "malicious mischief making" in attacking Socred leader Bill Bennett as the only obstacle to creating a new unity party.

Safety Man Appointed

A Vancouver city transportation engineer has been appointed to the newly-created position of highways safety engineer with the provincial government.

John Lisman, 41, will take up his position July 29.

Highways Minister Graham Lea said today Lisman will be responsible "for the development and administration of a comprehensive public highway safety program."

His duties will be to recommend highway improvement, conduct safety seminars and represent B.C. on the co-operative federal-provincial road safety.

$1M Expansion At St. Michael's

About $1 million will be spent on a two-step expansion program to upgrade the facilities of St. Michael's University School, the "old boy" of private schools in Western Canada.

Excavation work has started on the first stage of the program, a 90-bed residence for boarders, the first new residence to be built since 1912 at the site at Richmond and McRae.

The residence is expected to be in use at the end of the next academic year.

The second expansion stage will include a new auditorium building with indoor tennis, badminton and squash courts, changing facilities and an arts and crafts centre with special facilities for carving projects.

Deputy headmaster Douglas Williams said today the expansion would not only upgrade St. Michael's for its students, but would allow the buildngs to be used as a "family group centre."

"The school could be used by parents of students on evenings and during weekends and holdiays," Williams said.

A special effort has been made, Williams said, to "harmonize the new with the old" in the expansion program.

Headmaster Peter Caleb said earlier that starting in September, the junior school campus on Victoria will enrol Grades 1 and 2 in addition to the present Grades of 3-7.

QUICK MOVE SAVES LIFE OF WORKER

Ronald Warren Rogers cut his jugular vein in an industrial accident Wednesday noon, and owes his life to the quick action of a workmate.

Victoria police said Rogers, of 11025 Trillium, Sidney, was cutting overhead timbers with a powersaw at a building at 242 Mary when the saw struck something, snapped back, and cut him on the right side of his neck and shoulder.

Workmate Warren Boon of 6384 Oldfield, Saanich, rushed to apply first aid and held pressure at the collar bone to stop the bleeding. He yelled to a nearby tenant to call an ambulance.

Rogers, 32, was taken to Victoria General Hospital where doctors discovered the outer jugular vein had been cut.

Police said due to the quick action of Boon and the ambulance service, Rogers was whisked into surgery and soon out of danger.

He was treated and released.

Is the Toshiba electronic microwave oven a luxury, a necessity, or somewhere in between?
Answer our questionnaire and find out for yourself.

☐ Have you ever tried to keep a meal hot for someone who didn't show up at dinner-time?
☐ Ever been stuck when friends or neighbours dropped in unexpectedly, looking hungry?
☐ Ever wished that heated-up left-overs could manage to taste a little less "left over"?
☐ Ever felt you were cooking the life out of food, especially vegetables?
☐ Ever wished you could cook a roast or a chicken without "cooking" the whole kitchen, too?
☐ Ever arm-wrestled a frozen lambchop?
☐ Ever wished there really were such a thing as a self-cleaning oven?
☐ Ever wished you could skip scouring pots and pans, at least a few nights a week?

If you answered 'yes' to all or most of the above questions, you might just be in the market for a Toshiba electronic oven. Even though the least expensive model does cost $430.

The Toshiba oven is not necessarily a replacement for your conventional oven. You may still need it. But what the Toshiba oven will do is eliminate those little situations above, which don't do much to bring sunshine into your life.

You can get a hot meal ready, for family or guests, in less time than it would take to heat up a skillet. And if it's leftovers you're heating, they'll taste just as good as they did when they were freshly cooked. You won't be cooking away the flavour, colour or vitamins either. The Toshiba electronic oven is too fast for that.

No, you won't ever heat up your kitchen. The oven doesn't get hot, so how could your kitchen? Because the oven stays cool, food spatters don't burn on, and the oven wipes clean with a damp cloth. That's as close to self-cleaning as you can get. Because the oven stays cool, you can cook on serving plates. Eliminate pots and pans.

Toshiba has four models of their electronic oven they'd like you to see, Model ER 527 BT (suggested retail: $429.95), Model ER 625 BT (suggested retail: $449.95), Model ER 726 BT (suggested retail: $549.95, with a fast defrost feature), Model ER 722 BT (suggested retail: $589.95).

All four are easily installed wherever there's a 110-120 volt grounded outlet, and all are portable enough to go where you go, even up to the cottage or out on the boat.

We can't tell you that the Toshiba electronic oven is one of life's necessities. But it's a lot more fun to live with it than without it. Drop in to any Toshiba dealer, and ask for a demonstration you'll not only enjoy watching, but eating, too.

Joint Danger, Joint Protection

The new agreement between Canada and the United States calling for co-operative action to clean up oil spills in boundary waters off both coasts appears to have attracted most interest in the east, where disagreement over the exact location of the offshore boundary line added complications to the pact. But the arrangement will be equally necessary and effective in the west, and should prove to be a most important step forward in the mutual effort to protect sea and shore against the menace of pollution.

The agreement, to come into effect within a few days, provides for action by each country in the event of oil or other noxious spills from ships, drilling rigs or facilities ashore. Clean-up operations will be carried out in designated areas by the partners and it is clear that the arrangement will do much to diminish the possibilities of serious coastal damage from shipping and other marine operations.

The matter of future supertanker traffic into Puget Sound is of course the first concern of both Canadians and Americans on this coast. We may hope that effective measures will be worked out to cope with almost any eventuality. It must be expected, however, that no plan can be perfect, and the danger of major damage will always be present.

It is encouraging that the problem is now fully recognized at all levels of government in both countries, and that a full measure of co-operation will be brought to bear in trying to provide safeguards against the increasing oil-age hazard. May the plan long remain in force—and never be used.

By the Light of the Moon

A spirited defence of pet cats was voiced at Monday's Saanich council meeting when an amendment was being considered. The municipal bylaw in question provides that cats found "at large" in public and not accompanied by a competent person are breaking the law and subject to what might euphemistically be called permanent disposal.

That is tough on cats and on their affectionate owners. The bylaw brought forth the criticism by one cat defender that it was legislation "of destruction, not protection."

That stand, however, is open to question. Anyone who happens to drive, for instance, in the University campus area — Finnerty Road, say, or Arbutus Road — late at night, will pass numerous pairs of cat's eyes caught up in the headlights' glare along the roadside.

What are these soft, pretty little felines doing out at night? They are reverting to their natural instinctive urge to become nocturnal predators, that's what. They are stalking mice (good), other small animals (not so good), and nesting birds (very bad).

In one of the very few areas in North America where the English skylark is found, dozens, perhaps scores, of hungry cats prowl through the night, seeking the nests among the tall grass. The sleepy tabby who lolls so gracefully on a pillow during the day under its mistress's admiring eyes, may merely be pooped out from slaughtering little birds all night.

It's a thought, anyway, and it may have been in the minds of the framers of the Saanich bylaw which seeks to curb destruction of the birdlife which is so delightful a feature of Saanich suburbia.

Science to the Rescue

Until investigations are completed it will be impossible to specify the cause of the mass death of fish near Port Alice. On a previous occasion the theory was advanced that effluent from the Rayonier pulp mill had reduced the oxygen content of Neurotsos Inlet, leading to widespread destruction of fish. Since that time new regulations have been applied to release of effluent in the Inlet.

The latest incident could be related to other factors as well. What does stand out, however, as an offset to the hazards which modern industrialization poses to wild life, is the immediate concern of commercial and governmental experts when massive fish kills are reported. There was a day when such a report would arouse little if any response from anyone.

We have come a long way in the past few years to prove that industry need not be destructive to natural life, that restraints can be imposed without dooming industry to economic death. This universal change of attitude has been due largely to aroused public interest which in turn led to expert studies, governmental regulations and industrial co-operation.

It does not detract from the wisdom of the modern conservationist trend to point out that anything less would eventually have rendered the environment unfit for man as well as beast. We saw the urgent need, at long last, and did something about it. Let's continue.

WILLIAM R. FRYE

The Hazard of Two Crises

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — The fall of yet another government in Italy last week was more than a reflection of instability and weakness in one European country. It was a reminder that two parallel, and interrelated, crises are at hand in much of the free world.

One is a money crisis. Oil-consuming countries are like a man whose expenses have suddenly skyrocketed without any increase in his income. His household is in turmoil as he attempts to adjust to a new, and lower, standard of living.

The other is a crisis of confidence in democratic institutions. The responsiveness and even the value of the democratic system is being questioned, because so many problems are not being solved.

Italy is in the throes of both crises. France is seeking to fend them off. India has been to the brink, and has pulled back. Britain was headed there, just three months ago, but seems now to be muddling through.

Soaring Costs

There is scarcely an oil-consuming democracy which is not suffering from the effects of inflation compounded by soaring oil costs. Even major producers, like the United States and Canada, are affected.

It is not possible to pay an additional $45 billion, as oil importers are expected to do this year, without cutting down on other consumption. Nations cannot indefinitely import much more than they pay for with exports.

But which other consumption? Who is to make what sacrifices? And how is the government to force its citizens to do without things they consider essential?

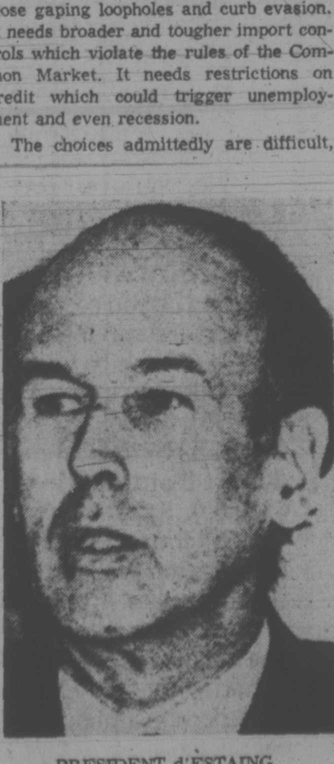
The householder whose budget is out of whack has the wife and kids on his back. Does his wife go without new clothes? Does his son leave college? Are family vacations to be scrapped?

These are non-essentials, but the things the Italians will have to forego to pay for oil are not — especially if the poor are made to share the burden through higher food costs. Belt-tightening is always most difficult for those with the fewest notches in their belts.

Italy's government, facing a prospective $8.5 billion trade deficit and 20 per cent inflation, could agree on nothing better than borrowing another $1 billion to subsidize the country's standard of living for a few weeks more.

Italy needs drastic tax reform to close gaping loopholes and curb evasion. It needs broader and tougher import controls which violate the rules of the Common Market. It needs restrictions on credit which could trigger unemployment and even recession.

The choices admittedly are difficult, but the real reason they were not made is that they would have been politically unpopular — with the poor, if across-the-board austerity were ordered, and with the rich, if selective controls and tougher taxation were instituted.



PRESIDENT d'ESTAING
. . . new reformer

This, in turn, compounded an older problem: the progressive loss of confidence in democratic institutions. Not only do such governments fear to lead; they too often seem unwilling to follow.

For years, there has been a groundswell of demand in Western Europe for fundamental change — for a more equitable distribution of the wealth being produced in this (for Europe) relatively prosperous time. It is a demand for a Roosevelt-type New Deal.

But governments have dragged their heels. They have promised reform, and when elected, have shoved it to the back burner. It is as if Herbert Hoover were to have remained president, practising laissez-faire economics, for another four-year term after the Roosevelt landslide in 1932.

President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France is, at long last, exploring the possibilities of change. But like his predecessor, Georges Pompidou, he is finding it difficult to break away from dependence on the right-wing Gaullists. He may or may not become an authentic reformer.

Soothed Economy

Britain's Prime Minister Harold Wilson, who came to power in the midst of major labor upheaval and deep economic distress, has soothed the British economy. But it remains to be seen if he has cured it.

Portugal's moderate Centrists and Leftists, who ousted a right-wing dictatorship in April, are acting courageously in foreign affairs but frustrating even their most loyal supporters by caution at home.

The result is a series of anxious questions. Does democracy really produce elected officials responsive to the wishes of the majority? Is it, as in Northern Ireland, always wise for them to be responsive?

Americans who, in the wake of Watergate, have been making clear their desire for basic electoral reform, and getting little of it from their legislatures, know the feeling. It is obvious that democracy is working only very imperfectly in many parts of the world. And totalitarians like the neo-Fascist Italian Social Movement are ready in the wings.

"This isn't just a government crisis," Luigi Preti, Italy's outgoing Transport Minister, observed last week, in a comment that could be echoed from Belfast to New Delhi. "The real danger is the discredit and breakdown of our democratic institutions."

When Is a Voter Not a Voter?

TORONTO — In all probability, this is the last time "British subjects" will be entitled to vote in a Canadian federal election. Henceforth — unless there is another election by June 26, 1975 — only Canadian citizens will have the vote.

For election returning officers, the change cannot come too soon. Nothing has less rationale behind it, or causes more confusion in compiling the voters' lists, than the current provision that certain British subjects may vote even though they are not Canadian citizens.

The confusion will not end with this election, however, unless the provinces change their provincial and municipal elections acts to bring them into conformity with federal eligibility. In most provinces there is no uniformity now and there will be less after this election.

Every Canadian citizen who is 18 or over has the vote federally. But a "British subject" may also vote, even though not a Canadian citizen, provided he or she has been in Canada since June 25, 1967 and was at least 20 years old on that date. This right will continue, according to an amendment in the federal election law made in 1970, up to June 26, 1975, whereupon it disappears.

Canadian Citizens

A British subject in this connection does not include those who, not having become citizens, were nevertheless domiciled in Canada for five years prior to Jan. 1, 1947. They are deemed in law to be Canadian citizens, even though they may have no papers to prove it.

If this is not confusing enough, it gets more so. The term "British subject" is not defined in the election laws, and its meaning is supplied from time to time to both the federal and provincial chief electoral officers by the federal Department of Citizenship, according to which countries are considered to be members, at the time of any given election, of that amorphous thing called the Commonwealth of Nations.

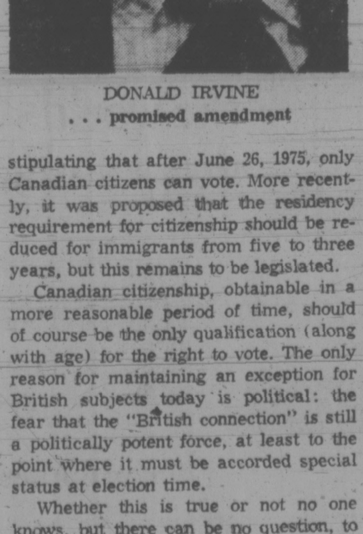
There are currently about 30 such but there is no point to listing them. Most readers would not recognize many of the names and it could change tomorrow. Suffice it to say that citizens of such choice democracies as the Union of South Africa, Southern Rhodesia and Ghana can vote in Canada on July 8 provided, of course, they meet the residency requirement.

This, as noted, is about seven years now for a federal election but for most provincial and municipal elections it is much less. In Ontario, for example, a British subject may vote provincially if he has lived in the province for a year prior to the election, and municipally if he has lived a year in the municipality where the election is being held.

The federal law has some quirks of its own. A British subject may be a citizen of a country that was not a member of the Commonwealth — indeed, may not have been existence — on June 25, 1967, the base line for measuring Canadian residence. Is he eligible to vote on July 8 or isn't he?

Perhaps the strangest quirk of all, however, is that the federal citizenship act "deems" certain persons to be British subjects even though the countries of which they are citizens are not members of the Commonwealth and fervently do not want to be. The most notable example of this is the Republic of Ireland. Yes, that's right: Irishmen from southern Ireland are considered "British subjects" and can vote on July 8 provided they have been here since June 25, 1967. Figure that one out.

Obviously, the whole thing has to be rationalized, which was what the federal government set out to do in 1970 by stipulating that after June 26, 1975, only Canadian citizens can vote. More recently, it was proposed that the residency requirement for citizenship should be reduced for immigrants from five to three years, but this remains to be legislated.



DONALD IRVINE
. . . promised amendment

Canadian citizenship, obtainable in a more reasonable period of time, should of course be the only qualification (along with age) for the right to vote. The only reason for maintaining an exception for British subjects today is political: the fear that the "British connection" is still a politically potent force, at least to the point where it must be accorded special status at election time.

Whether this is true or not no one knows, but there can be no question, to judge from the recent behavior of the Ontario government and Legislature, that the fear is real.

The occasion was second reading of house-keeping changes in the Ontario Municipal Elections Act. The Liberal opposition, obviously not having thought through the consequences, moved that the phrase "or other British subject" be deleted from the Act, so that only Canadian citizens could be municipal electors.

Whereupon young John Smith, the Tory back-bencher from Hamilton Mountain, rose to evoke the founder of the Conservative Party, Sir John A. Macdonald — "A British subject I was born, a British subject I will die" — and declare, in the best Diefenbaker fashion, that the Liberals were up to their old tricks of trying to erode "the British connection, monarchial symbols and other items in our heritage."

Whereupon all hell broke loose. At first, the minister in charge of the legislation, Donald Irvine (whose riding, incidentally, is Grenville-Dundas, the heart of Orange Lodge Ontario) described Mr. Smith's remarks as "detrimental" and said he personally agreed with the Liberals that Canadian citizenship should be the only qualification for voting. He promised and subsequently produced an amendment to require just that.

Up in Arms

Whereupon the NDP rose up in arms to protest that the government was in effect disenfranchising thousands of voters. A Tory backbencher said he would vote with the NDP. The Liberals, suddenly aware the NDP was right, began to backtrack. Mr. Irvine said he certainly did not want to disenfranchise anyone, and debate was adjourned to allow for greater reflection.

When it resumed a week later, Mr. Irvine said he was withdrawing his amendment. The Liberals then moved a "grandfather clause" whereby British subjects already in the province would be allowed to vote but newcomers would have to acquire Canadian citizenship. Thoroughly rattled by now, Mr. Irvine said he would have to have time to reflect on that too, although he had earlier said there would have to be a grandfather clause.

At the third sitting, Mr. Irvine announced he wasn't buying any amendments. The law would stay as it is, because the Liberal amendment would only confuse matters further. What has to be done, he lamely concluded, is for all levels of government to get together and sort out the confusion.

Bribery

We consider it wicked that in the bad old days, a candidate spent his own money in bribing electors to vote for him.

But today it is legal and universal for a candidate to offer a bribe to the electors, by promising them that if elected he will see that the property of other persons is distributed to them. This is so much more honest than before, and much easier on his own pocket.

This time, let the electors tell the politicians they are fed up with the ever-increasing expenditures, extravagances and intrusions into private affairs of governments, which should be our servants, but which have made themselves our masters.

Within the last ten years, federal expenditures have increased from six to 24 billions of dollars, the greater part to bolster the pride and impudence of ignorant officials. — J. P. Thornton, 943 Wilmer St.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of June 20, 1914

Can a millionaire be a Christian. This was one of the subjects arranged by a committee of the Methodist church conference for discussion at next year's gathering as a prayer hour topic, but when it was broached this afternoon there was considerable objection to it. The inference was too strong for some of the delegates in view of the number of rich men who are members of the Methodist Church, so a substitute subject, Christianity and Wealth, will take its place on the agenda. The church conference is said to have a number of controversial subjects on its roster. Montreal is the city which delegates have unanimously agreed upon for the meeting.

THE DESPAIR NOT EVENLY DISTRIBUTED

Out of Disaster, a People Find Some Answers

By FRANK DREW
The London Observer

OUAGADOUGOU, Upper Volta — "Coca-Cola — today's thirst!" proclaim the stickers in the bars of Bamako, Ouagadougou, and a dozen other sub-Saharan cities of West Africa. But 1974's thirst is, yet again, proving rather more intractable than that, and looks likely to do so even with the advent of the rains in the next two or three weeks. If the Sahelian countries had only their climate to contend with there would be fewer disaster specialists questioning their very viability as nations, or advocating the abandonment of all the land north of the rivers Senegal and Niger to the advancing desert.

Many reputations have suffered. The Carnegie Foundation has trenchantly criticized both the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization and the American Agency for International Development for being slow to admit the true dimensions of disaster.

But, considering the ponderousness of the bureaucracies which govern both bodies, it is probably more remarkable that they have achieved as much as they have. Britain's Overseas Development Ministry has failed to impress by, for example, its insistence that an animal traction project in which it is involved in Upper Volta should buy British when similar and far cheaper equipment is available in neighboring Senegal.

One church charity official has placed innumerable obstacles in the way of other development agencies (and of journalists) by calling for the suspension of aid to Mali until the government there toes a different line. As a result, the country's sixth region (which includes most of the badly-hit north of Mali) is almost inaccessible to foreigners. Ill-thought-out attempts by foreign agencies to break into the circle of desperation succeed only in tackling symptoms, leaving causes unguessed-at: one charity last year engaged in a well-publicized cattle vaccination program, which an experienced development worker described to me as "giving oxygen to dying cattle; it kept them healthy until they could starve."

This year the cattle, at any rate, have few problems; not enough of them are left to provide any real competition for what grazing is available. But what the cattle faced last year the people are facing now. Admittedly the picture is patchy, and there are brighter spots, such as Upper Volta, which has managed to move most of the grain needed to the affected areas before the rains come, and thus has avoided the need for an air-lift.

But in Mali there are very real shortages, which go a long way to explain the unwillingness of more than a handful of Malian refugees in camps in Niger to return across the border; a foreign nurse who recently let slip that some aid food was not reaching the starving in Mali's sixth region quickly found herself out of the country. The camp of Malian refugees outside Niamey, the capital of Niger, which numbered 3,000 last year, now has 17,000 inhabitants, a more eloquent testimony to the simple fact of starvation than the sophisticated data of calamity still demanded of governments which are just not equipped to produce detailed statistics.

And if this is not a drought that lends itself to neatly quantified tabulations of despair, neither is it particularly amenable to poignant photo-journalism. Walk through the market in most Sahelian capitals and see the ample food available — for those with the money to spend.

One India-hardened famine veteran drove across northern Upper Volta, asking: "Where's the drought?" Brian Walker, Oxfam's director-designate, after the same journey described the region biblically as "the abomination of desolation"; deserted villages, empty grain baskets, crops with the life snuffed out of them after six inches' growth.

In many cases people have just upped and decamped to the already straining savannah towns further south. Elsewhere this flight has been elevated into a policy as ugly as its name: sedentarisation. "If you are to survive," the nomads are told, "you must change your way of life completely."

This difference between towns able to cope (if only just) and countryside prostrate in the wake of death and depopulation is as real as it is apparent, and is symptomatic of what may yet prove the Sahel's most insidious enemy: the French legacy of centralized and heavily bureaucratic control.

"The French in Africa were administrators, nothing more," says one aid official. "They did sweet nothing for their colonies, and they left no example for them to follow. This means that, understandably, there aren't even the beginnings of an ability to plan. The initiative in planning items like hospitals and roads almost always lies with foreign agencies. The best thing we could do for the Sahel countries is give them planners."

The other side of the old colonial coin is the persistent belief that answers can come only from the top, that civil servants and conseilleurs techniques must stay at their desks and feed solutions into the well-honed administrative structure.

This leads to totally unrealistic suggestions emanating from administrators who are simply unfamiliar with conditions outside their own capitals. One French aid assistant proposed to hire 1,000 donkeys to move in supplies over roads which he assumed to be impassable during the rainy season, roads which foreign charities were happily negotiating with lorries at the height of the rains.

It is in the light of this town-biased administration, and of the settled cultivator's envious distrust of the wandering herdsman, that allegations of "genocide by default," said to have been practised by the Malian government against the Tuareg nomads, should be judged. There is a strong prejudice in favor of what is "normale," and a nomad is less "normale" than most.

But people are finding answers. At Tchiherozine, in Niger, a Catholic priest has shown the villagers how to use the rocks which litter the landscape to built not only windbreaks, which trap the topsoil blown by the desert winds and enable vegetation to take root, but miniature dams to slow the progress of the floodwaters along the river beds. As a result water which used to flow past in a matter of hours is now available for days, and leaves behind not just a silted area capable of supporting growth but a water-table that has risen by five feet. Most important of all, the people of Tchiherozine have learned that they have power to control their own destiny to a degree they had never dreamed of. And others are learning from them.

Let's Get Those Reports Out in the Sunlight

By MOIRA FARROW
The Sun

Exactly a year ago some very welcome news came out of Victoria. The provincial government announced it had decided to do something about one of B.C.'s most serious problems — conflict between the different users of the province's natural resources.

In a land as rich in forests, rivers, lakes and minerals as B.C., the conflicts had reached absurd proportions. Loggers were tangling with hikers, ranchers were arguing with wildlife biologists, fishermen were quarrelling with pulp mill managers and conservationists were battling mining promoters.

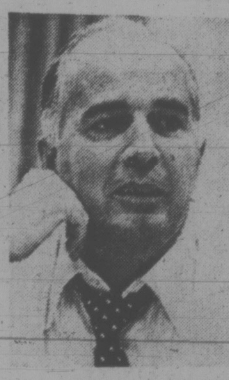
Under the Social Credit regime nothing at all was done to referee these fights or even cool the confrontations.

Then in June 1973 the new government in Victoria acted. It ordered in-depth studies of three areas where the conflicts were most serious — the Purcell Mountains in the Kootenays, the Mica Dam reservoir in the Rocky Mountain trench and the Whistler valley north of Squamish.

Previously, in February 1973, the government had announced a similar study of the Tsitika-Schoen watershed on northern Vancouver Island.

Full steam ahead were the instructions from Victoria to the various consultants hired to carry out these four studies. And the consultants have, apparently, lived up to their commitments.

Dr. Alan Chambers, a University of B.C. forestry professor and director of UBC's resources science centre, submitted his Purcell Range study to Resources Minister Bob Williams last fall.



WILLIAMS
. . . secrecy

Vancouver consultant W. J. (Bill) Blakely completed his Whistler study last January and sent it to Victoria immediately. The Mica Dam group, headed by engineer Ken Farquharson, also finished its study early this year and submitted it to Victoria.

The Vancouver Island analysis of the Tsitika-Schoen watershed is a longer job and is not yet due for completion.

But of the three reports that were finished months and months ago, the public has seen nothing except a preliminary draft of the Purcells report which was leaked to The Sun.

Williams has always assured the press that these studies, so vital to the future development of B.C., would be made public.

In January he told this reporter that the Purcells study would be released in "about two weeks" and that the Mica study would follow in "about two months." Since then — silence.

The preliminary draft of the Purcells study, which was mailed to The Sun in a plain brown envelope, contained devastating information about the state of the forest industry in the Kootenays.

It revealed that much of the forest land in the 7,500-square-mile area covered by the study is over-committed to logging. And it pointed out that resource users are faced with drastic decisions.

Williams has already heeded some of the points raised in the Purcells report, judging from his April announcement of creation of a 325,000-acre wilderness conservation area in the region.

So what is the purpose of keeping the report a great big secret any longer?

The idea of commissioning these studies in the first place was excellent. But there is growing resentment of the fact that the minister is keeping the results hidden in his bottom drawer.

There is particular urgency about the contents of the Whistler study because that area could be the site of the 1980 Winter Olympics. The provincial government has already procrastinated for months on the question of whether or not to give the games its blessing. A decision has finally been promised for early July.

But, in the meantime, the Vancouver-Garibaldi Olympic Committee has spent time and money on a trip to Switzerland to present its case to a meeting of the International Sports Federations. All these efforts will have been in vain if the government turns thumbs down on the games.

A substantial portion of the Blakely report on Whistler is devoted to the Olympics so the government has obviously known its consultant's advice since January.

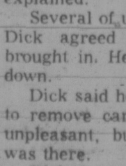
A source closely involved with the report told The Vancouver Sun that he is convinced the government thinks skiing is only "for affluent West Vancouver lawyers."

Whether or not that is true remains to be seen. Public feeling on the games, pro or con, does not seem very heated. But let's get the decision over and done with before the committee spends any more money. And then let's have this crucial report made public before the Olympics decision is made.

Williams seems immune to suggestions from the press and even from his own government biologists that the resources reports be released.

So now it's up to the opposition to do some prodding.

It's Time for Another Deck . . .



RUSSELL BAKER

We went to Dick's house for poker. After the first few hands at which Dick won big and wiped out George, Bob and Carl both noticed something about their cards. "My cards are making a lot of static," Bob said.

"Mine are crackling," said Carl.

"Hey," said Bob. "These cards are bugged."

Dick was furious. It was disgraceful, he said. Bugged cards. And in his house too. He called in H.R. (Bob) who was in charge of cards.

"H.R. (Bob)," he said, "these cards are bugged, and I'll bet I know who did it."

"It was John Wesley," said H.R. (Bob).

"You bet your life it was," Dick said. "Tell him he's through at this house, and bring us another deck."

The game resumed. It was seven-card stud. On the next hand Archie was showing two aces up, with three more cards to come. That was when Dick refused to deal him a fifth card.

"You didn't give me my card," said Archie.

"That's right," Dick said. "You can't have any more cards in this hand."

Archie said he had never heard of such a thing. Dick said it was his house, and Archie was there at his pleasure, and if Archie didn't want to act like a good guest, he could get out. Archie did.

On the next hand Leon drew five deuces, but didn't bet heavily because Dick was showing four kings up. "What kind of deck is this?" Leon demanded, and began counting the cards. All except Dick's. Dick wouldn't turn his over.

Without Dick's seven cards, Leon counted only 36 cards in the rest of the deck. What's more, 17 of them were deuces.

He said he'd never seen a poker deck with only 43 cards, 17 of which were deuces.

"I want the rest of the deck," he told Dick.

Dick said he couldn't have them.

"Why not?" asked Leon.

"Because those cards are not relevant to this particular game," Dick explained.

Several of us grumbled about this, so Dick agreed to have a fresh deck brought in. He put it on the table face down.

Dick said he had had the deck edited to remove cards that were coarse and unpleasant, but everything we needed was there.

Dick began to deal. He had dealt every hand so far and somebody asked when the rest of us would get a turn.

Dick said it was out of the question for anybody else to do the dealing, because the deck was confidential and it would set a bad precedent if it were passed from hand to hand like a bag of peanuts at a baseball game.

Both Pete and Leon showed strong hands on the next deal, but Dick wasn't showing anything because he had dealt all his own cards face down.

Finally Pete called. He had a straight flush and Leon had four nines. "That's too bad, fellows," said Dick, raking in the pot.

"What's the idea?" cried Pete. "We called you. You've got to show us your hand."

"I'll tell you everything you need to know," said Dick. "I have a royal straight flush."

"We want to see the cards," Pete and Leon chorused.

"No dice, fellows," said Dick. "It would violate the principles of confidentiality. If I did that, no host would ever again be able to keep his cards to himself."

Everybody was almost broke now, except Dick, but Pete and Leon agreed to one more hand. This time Pete had three of a kind and Leon a full house. Again Dick raked in the pot.

"Do you feel like telling us what you had?" asked Pete.

"Two jacks," Dick said.

"But two jacks don't beat a full house," sighed Leon.

"Of course they do," said Dick. "It's right here in the book."

And he pulled out a small text entitled "Dick's Rules of Poker," and started to read.

Nobody had the heart to get angry with Dick. Everybody knew how much winning meant to him.

"Come over again soon and we'll play high-stakes billiards," Dick called as we left, and then went inside, probably to start warping cues.

FIRST COSY AND SPOT —AND NOW IT'S SPY

Central Saanich police are organizing more youth activities.

Like Victoria's COSY and Saanich's SPOT, the Central Saanich force has helped young people form Saanich Penninsula Youth — SPY.

This Saturday marks the first major function by the group: a dance at the agriculture hall on the Saanichton fairgrounds on East Saanich Road starting at 8 p.m.

Sponsored by the police, though organized by 10 students from Parklands and Mount Newton secondary schools, the dance will feature the Nanaimo band New Day.

Tickets are $1.50 a person. Dress is optional — but "no jeans," the students ask.

Central Saanich Constable Steve Chater said police have been helping youth over the past six months develop more activity programs.

"We hope to be able to provide activities here that previously were lacking," he said.

More Funds Promised for Nature Centre

Saanich has bought about half the 170 acres for the proposed Swan Lake-Christmas Hill nature centre and sociological teaching area, council's environment committee was told Wednesday.

Federal and provincial funds have been promised to help buy the remainder, said Kees van Westen of the municipal planning department.

The Nature Conservancy of Canada also will solicit money from industry.

The committee endorsed the planning department's recommendation for makeup of the project's board of directors.

One representative each will be named by Saanich council, Greater Victoria school board, provincial education department, Victoria Natural History Society, Greater Victoria Environmental Centre, B.C. parks branch, National Second Century Fund, Nature Conservancy of Canada and the Capital Regional Board.

Two directors will come from the University of Victoria.

And at Ald. Mel Couverier's suggestion one resident of the Swan Lake-Christmas Hill area will be on the board.

The board will direct future acquisition of the land needed, establish objectives and a detailed development plan, explore means of getting funds for developing and operating the nature centre, and govern its operation.

The board will act as co-ordinator, utilizing federal and provincial make-work programs, local service clubs, high school and vocational school industrial arts classes, grants from private industry and other sources.

Van Westen told the committee that School District 61 had agreed in principle to make a 7½-acre site available near Rogers Avenue.

Westen said $140,000 had been promised from the National Second Century Fund and the provincial government had agreed to donate $400,000 from its Greenbelt Fund.

The Nature Conservancy of Canada which promotes donations from industry for conservation purposes, had "indicated they are very enthusiastic" Westen said.

The nature centre will have hiking trails, viewing and teaching areas, as well as a children's farm area, probably on the old Pendray farm.

Westen said the University of Victoria is particularly interested in the stands of Gary oaks on Christmas Hill. He said 12 acres would be set aside for an ecological reserve.

The area abounds in flora and fauna and Westen said a bird count, taken Dec. 25, 1973, had identified 175 different species at Swan Lake.

NEW GOVERNOR of B.C. Toastmasters, Sinclair Farris of 1051 Beverley Place, was elected at the group's annual meeting in Nanaimo. Farris assumes office July 1.

Board Backs French Class

Despite the provincial government's "no French school" policy, Greater Victoria school board gave unanimous support Wednesday to a possible takeover of the defence department's French language school at Naden.

A special committee will be set up to study integration of the school's 32 students, children of French Canadian armed forces personnel, and four teachers into Greater Victoria School District.

The B.C. government's policy of not providing French instruction for Francophone Canadians will be a problem for trustees to face, board chairman Peter Bunn told parents at a special meeting.

"But these are hurdles over which we will assuredly jump," he said.

The 100 per cent French school at the armed forces base was set up in September after talks aimed at providing French instruction in Sooke school district broke down between the defence department and Sooke school board.

Base commander Capt. G. H. Hayes told the Victoria board parents were happy with the present school, but said they feel the children are missing social and recreational benefits they would get in a larger school.

"The obvious answer is to take our little school and set it into a bigger school," said parent Mrs. Anita Comeau.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Judge William Ostler described the conduct of a man in provincial court Wednesday as "absolutely contemptible" and then fined him $150 for assault causing bodily harm.

William John Nichols, 25, of 563 Dunedin, was also placed on probation for a year.

Nichols pleaded guilty to the offence which stemmed from an incident Dec. 4 in which he grabbed a woman he had been living with and threw her against a kitchen door.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said the woman received cuts which required several stitches.

Defence counsel Harold Turnham said Nichols and the woman have reconciled their differences.

★ ★ ★

A Victoria woman received a year's probation from Ostler on theft charges.

Judy Selina Bolton, 19, pleaded guilty to stealing two wrist watches, a wallet, cufflinks, a key case and a gold ring from a suite on Toronto Street on May 7.

The goods were worth about $550.

She also shoplifted eye shadow worth $1.85 from Shoppers Drug Mart, 1302 Douglas.

Gerry McDonald of the Native Court Workers and Counselling Association told Ostler Mrs. Bolton had found a job, was recovering her children and is living with a responsible person.

Ostler noted that usually a jail term is appropriate for someone — such as Mrs. Bolton — who had a previous conviction related to theft, but decided not to impose a jail term because she is prepared to change her way of life.

★ ★ ★

A man who pleaded guilty to possession of stolen property had a unique character witness appear in court — the man whose property had been stolen.

Kevin John Baker, 18 of 1111 Wychbury, took two boxes of stereo equipment to a pawn shop Jan. 25 and sold it for $100.

The equipment was $720 worth of property belonging to Mark Jackman, 1266 Johnson.

Jackman, a YMCA worker and aquaintance of Baker's, told Ostler he was willing to help Baker.

Baker received a suspended sentence and a year's probation.

★ ★ ★

David Henry Paterson, 54, of 6797 Grant, Sooke was fined $350 and given a one-month driving suspension for driving with more than .08 per cent alcohol, and John William Bird, 29, of 1132 Queens, was fined $400 and had his license suspended for impaired driving.

BANDAGE BANDIT DRAWS A BLANK

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto's Bandage Bandit attempted his 12th bank holdup in two months Monday, but was foiled by a teller who told him it was closing time.

Police said the bandit, identified by bandages worn to conceal his face, fled empty-handed after attempting a robbery at a west-end bank two minutes before the 3 p.m. closing time.

The Bandage Bandit, who has escaped with more than $18,000 in 11 recent robberies, handed a holdup note and showed the butt of a gun to teller Grace Rizzuto.

She told him her wicket was shutting down and he would have to go to another wicket.

The bandit then confronted Romana Chiuchilo with the same note.

"I will not give you any money," she shouted for all to hear.

The bandit warned her not to press the alarm button or he would shoot.

She pressed the alarm.

He fled.

Super Road At Cathedral Now Dropped

PARIS (UPI) — President Valery Giscard d'Estaing has saved 800-year-old Notre Dame cathedral from being bordered by a superhighway, the Association for the Protection of Notre Dame announced Wednesday.

Association vice-president Mrs. Louis Fougere said there was "great hope" the newly-elected president also would discard other projects of the late president Georges Pompidou for more skyscrapers and expressways in the French capital.

"We are very happy," said Mrs. Fougere, surrounded by association members at their headquarters on Rue Chamoinesse behind the great cathedral. "The president wrote us he will 're-examine' the highway by Notre Dame and that means it is finished.

"Whether he will review projects for skyscrapers we do not know, but we think his decision on Notre Dame shows he will make Paris a city in which people can live."

The expressway would have destroyed the anoient tree-lined quays by the cathedral which lovers, fishermen, dogs and guitar-strumming youth have enjoyed for centuries.

The late Pompidou said in 1971, "we must adapt Paris to the automobile." The newspaper Le Monde said Giscard d'Estaing's plan was "to adapt the automobile to Paris."

Updated Universities Act Passes

Students are still in but senators failed to place when the legislature Wednesday approved composition of the boards of governors in a new Universities Act.

Third reading of the bill passed, updating the 1963 University Act and providing for the addition of a universities council.

It will have wide powers to advise the government and universities, conduct research on university development, co-ordinate financing, recommend new universities and many related functions.

Harvey Schroeder (SC — Chilliwack) tried unsuccessfully to bring in an amendment increasing the proposed 15-member boards of governors of the universities to 17 with the inclusion of two senate members.

Education Minister Eileen Dailly said the government felt 15 was a large enough number and pointed out that a person could be elected to both bodies.

Oak Bay Conservative Scott Wallace supported Schroeder's amendment, suggesting the senate is a good training ground for the board of governors and he approved overlapping and integration of membership in the two bodies.

The act allows for two students named by the student association of a university to serve on the board of governors.

University of B.C. researcher Pat McGeer (L-Vancouver-Pt. Grey) argued against student representation, pointing out that such service acts as a distraction from the thing they are attending university for."

Soviets Checking Radioactivity

TOKYO (Reuter) — Soviet planes approached the western coast of Japan nine times Wednesday apparently to collect radioactive dust from China's latest nuclear test, the Japanese defence agency said today.

The agency said the Russian aircraft had not entered Japanese airspace, but Japanese fighter planes were scrambled as a precautionary step.

Meanwhile, official aerial investigations today detected a sharp drop from the abnormally high radioactivity level recorded over Japan after China's nuclear test Monday.

Japan's radioactive countermeasures headquarters said this showed that air contamination from fallout had passed its peak.

Counts from dust collected Wednesday showed one of the highest levels of radioactivity ever recorded in Japan.

Only a Few Labor Contracts Feature Cost-of-Living

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal labor department survey of collective agreements shows that less than 10 per cent of contracts have a provision that ties wages to cost-of-living increases.

The survey indicates that 233 of 2,440 agreements filed with the department have cost-of-living allowances and 190 of these provide for a cents-an-hour increase based on per-point rises in the consumer price index.

The index measures changes in the cost of living based on estimated spending habits of an "average" family. In May, the index rose 1.7 per cent above the previous month to 164.6 — the highest month-to-month jump in 23 years.

With the recent rapid increases in the cost of living, unions have been making cost-of-living allowances a major goal in collective bargaining.

The strikes by construction workers in Quebec, which involve an estimated 50,000 employees, have erupted as members of the Quebec Federation of Labor demand reopening of existing agreements and negotiation of adjustments that would keep wages in step with inflation. in step with inflation.

The 233 contracts cited by the department survey with cost-of-living allowances cover 385,269 employees, or about 20 per cent of the total number of workers covered by the total 2,440 agreements. About 68 per cent of the adjusted contracts are in the manufacturing sector.

Although most of the adjusted agreements provide for a cents-an-hour raise per point increase in the consumer price index, some give percentage raises based on percentage jumps in the index.

Other findings of the survey were:

—Quarterly adjustments are provided for in 124 of the 190 cents-an-hour agreements.

—The most common range of payment is one cent for every raise in the index of four tenths to six tenths of one index point.

—Maximum payments set out in 91 of the agreements range from three to 30 cents an hour for a contract year.

—A provision that the consumer price index must climb by a minimum amount before application of the formula is a feature of 57 agreements.

—Of the 233 agreements with a cost-of-living allowance, 119 covered 500 or more employees.

The survey covers all agreements under federal jurisdiction and all those covering 200 or more employees under provincial jurisdiction.

FARMERS STILL MAKE A PROFIT

OTTAWA (CP) — Despite sharp rises in feed prices last year, farmers still profited from the sale of meat and poultry products, a food prices review board working paper says.

The paper, prepared by board economists R. M. A. Lyons and David J. Clarke, says that feed and protein prices "increased dramatically" between November, 1972, and late 1973. U.S. corn sold in Montreal markets rose by 115 per cent to $123.80 a ton; domestic barley prices rose 102 per cent to $106.50 a ton; soymeal prices rose 234 per cent to $468.90 a ton.

But the authors add that "market prices of each commodity increaseed at least enough to offset the higher feed prices and left producers in at least as profitable a position as they were when feed prices began to increase in late 1972."

Beef prices, however, did begin to drop in the fall of 1973 and early 1974 because of a flood of U.S. imports, now curtailed through the use of tight government restrictions on imports of cattle treated with the growth hormone diethylsfilbbestrol (DES).

The paper was prepared as background for a previously released board policy statement on feed grain. In the earlier report, the board described feed grains — corn, barley, oats and poorer grades of wheat — as vitally important components in consumer food prices.

Assassination Story Called Utter Nonsense

BEIRUT, Lenanon (AP) King Faisal of Saudi Arabia escaped an assassination attempt two weeks ago, the leftist newspaper Al-Moharrir says. But the Saudi embassy said the report was "utter nonsense, self-denying and a fabrication from A to Z."

The newspaper says travellers arriving from Saudi Arabia said the attempt occurred June 4, when the 69-year-old monarch was travelling from Jidda to his summer palace in Tayef.

The report said a big military car smashed into the royal motorcade but instead of ramming the king's limousine it struck a security jeep, killing its driver and injuring royal guards."

The report says the car's driver died in a hospital before he could be questioned.

CALGARY LIVESTOCK

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 11 a.m. today from the Calgary Public Stockyards totalled 600 head, mostly slaughter cattle lacking quality with the bulk being cows. Trade was dull with a narrow demand.

A few slaughter steers weighing more than 1,000 pounds were on offer, selling about steady. Steers under 1,000 pounds were under pressure, discounted $3 to $4. Heifers were $1 lower with lightweights discounted $3 to $5. Good cows sold unevenly steady.

Steers, A1, A2: 47.50-49.90.

Heifers, A1, A2: 38.50-40.50.

Cows, D1, D2: 27-30. D3: 23-26. D4: 18-20.

Replacements were mostly yearling steers meeting an indifferent demand at barely steady prices. Good feeder steers more than 600 pounds: 38-43.

No hogs were sold to 11 a.m.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — A weakening trend in Vancouver rapeseed after mid session dropped prices as much as 20 cents under previous close levels at the close Thursday on the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange.

Sellers outnumbered buyers throughout most of the day's trading, but the impact on prices wasn't felt until late in the session. There was no trading in Thunder Bay rapeseed, and trading in flax and rye was light.

Flax prices remained down by as much as 12 cents. Rye was the only commodity to advance and posted gains of as much as seven cents.

Wednesday's volume of trade was 396,000 bushels of flax, 1,260,000 of rapeseed and 995,000 of rye.

CHICAGO (AP) — Farm commodity futures maintained gains of 5 to 16 cents a bushel through much of the session on the Board of Trade Thursday but only wheat futures closed with a solid gain.

Corn and soybean prices were irregular at the close and oats were down 5 cents. Soybean meal was mixed and soybean oil declined about 70 points.

Late in the session, a major exporter sold corn, soybeans and wheat and it was theorized that the firm was lifting hedges against previous sales of these grains abroad. This started a wild selling move in all the major pits and new lows for the day were set. One soy oil contract fell the limit of 100 points.

Then there began a new buying move, with short covering, and wheat rose to near limits again.

U.S. Making Comeback In Wheat

WASHINGTON (AP) — New government figures on world grain supplies show the United States may rapidly gain back some of its standing among countries holding exportable reserves of wheat.

A similar assessment can be made for food grains such as corn, oats, barley and sorghum, although figures for those commodities have traditionally shown an overwhelming advantage for U.S. reserves.

Looking ahead to June 30, 1975—when this year's wheat crop will have gone to market—the agriculture department says that total wheat stocks held by the United States and its "major competitors" of Canada, Australia and Argentina will be 32.5 million metric tons.

Of that amount a year from now, some 12.2 million tons will be held by U.S. farmers and the grain trade and 20.3 million by the other three countries or a ratio of about 5-to-3 in favor of the foreign suppliers.

In addition to Canadian Press stock reports, bond and mutual fund prices, market quotations also are supplied by the following firms or agencies: Investment Dealers' Association of Canada, Richardson Securities, Royal Bank of Canada, Pemberton Securities, A. E. Ames & Co., Annett Mackay Ltd., Bongard Leslie & Co. Ltd., and Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Ontario Tax Not Deductible

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario's 50-per-cent tax on land speculation profits is not considered deductible from federal income tax, a revenue department spokesman said Tuesday.

"I don't think we've ruled on it," the spokesman said, "but our interpretation is that it is not deductible for federal income tax purposes."

The federal spokesman, in the revenue department's tax avoidance branch, said Ottawa's position may not necessarily stand up in court.

"It's merely our interpretation. It doesn't mean that a court would not say it's deductible."

In Toronto, Ontario Revenue Minister Arthur Meen said Monday the tax may have to be reduced if the federal government does not allow it as a deductible expense.

Meen said he is surprised at the federal government's ruling because provincial officials assumed when the tax was announced that it would be deductible as a business expense from federal income or capital gains taxes.

He said that at the moment, the federal ruling is "just a legal opinion."

Meen said if the ruling is final he will discuss "several alternatives" with his cabinet colleagues, including a possible court challenge.

Federal Finance Minister John Turner, who had said earlier that the provincial tax is an intrusion into federal taxing, was not available for comment.

The tax, in effect since April 9, has required land speculators to pay 50 per cent of all profits above the fair market value of the property before that date.

Arctic Air To Expand

OTTAWA (CP) — An application by Arctic Air Ltd. for authority to serve Wrigley and Norman Wells, N.W.T., and to move its base to Fort Nelson, B.C., from Fort Simpson, N.W.T., has been approved in part by the Canadian transport commission.

The commission denied the application to serve Norman Wells.

An application by Northward Airlines Ltd. to serve Wrigley and Fort Simpson only was denied. The commission issued another licence for Northward to serve Norman Wells, along with Wrigley and Fort Simpson. But Northern will not have any local traffic rights between Wrigley and Fort Simpson in either direction.

Rocketing World Oil Prices Pushing Nations to the Brink

By HOBART ROWEN

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A little more than a month ago in Basel, Switzerland, the rich nations' central bankers had one of their regular and secret sessions on the status of the world economy.

This time, the subject was the deepening financial crisis occasioned by the high price of oil set by the producers' cartel, which is causing horrendous balance of payments problems for Italy, France and Great Britain — as well as financial chaos for the hard-pressed developing countries.

But the most important financial men were far from the quaint little Swiss city. They were in Vienna, preparing for a meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, in Quito, Ecuador, where subsequently they would decide that the oil-consuming world would get no price relief.

Last week, the IMF's Committee of Twenty met in Washington for a session which once had been targeted as the final "wrap-up" conference for international monetary reform. But, as financial jitters spread, the best that the IMF could come up with was adoption of a few tentative steps attempting to ease the burdens placed on developing and developed nations alike by high price of oil.

The plain fact is that there can be only postponement — not settlement — of the threatening international monetary crisis so long as the consuming nations must meet oppressive oil bills on a continuing basis.

For the first time, some prominent bankers and international financial men speak of a world-wide recession, with the remaining strong nations — the United States and bail out other countries.

Writing in the July issue of Foreign Affairs, oil consultant Walter J. Levy warns that we are witnessing "an erosion of the world's oil supply and financial systems, comparable in its potential for economic and political disaster to the Great Depression of the 1930s."

Italy has already been driven to the edge of bankruptcy by a deficit in her balance of payments, running at an annual rate of $13 billion in the first four months of 1974. It is true that Italy has had other problems besides oil — a raging inflation, excessive imports of consumer goods, and a weak government. But it is oil that has pushed Italy to the brink, and reduced her credit-worthiness to almost zero.

France and Great Britain could be close on Italy's heels. The British balance of payments deficit just for oil this year is likely to be $7 billion, or as much as the estimated 1980 value of highly trumpted North Sea oil production.

The tremors are being felt, as well, in the huge $150 billion Eurodollar market, where major companies as well as nations have been borrowing money. This source could dry up quickly, because it has been fed by Arab "petio-dollars," placed on deposit for very short periods of time.

Recently, Chase Manhattan Bank head David Rockefeller expressed public concern about the Eurodollar market. The best way for banks to get in trouble, he pointed out, is by borrowing for short periods of time (from the Arabs) and lending for periods up to 7 years (to European countries in deficit).

It is for this reason — in desperation — the major governments quietly got together in Washington, and over dinner at the Watergate Hotel agred that Italy and others in the same boat should be allowed to pledge their gold reserves as loan collateral, not at the official $42.22 an ounce price, but at something "related" to the open market price of more than $150 an ounce.

This clever, stop-gap device was the brainchild of Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur F. Burns, who first proposed it to a surprised group of his colleagues at that meeting a month ago in Basel.

The Europeans for long have been urging that they be allowed to settle their debts with each other by the exchange of gold at real market prices. This would enable them, they hold, to "unfreeze" that portion of their reserves consisting of gold — but which they obviously wouldn't part with at $42.22 an ounce.

The wily Burns reasoned that something had to be done for Italy in a hurry, but that an across-the-board inflation of total world gold reserves would not only be unnecessary, but dangerous.

The gold "collateral" compromise, a concession by the United States, may buy time for Italy and other countries fortunate enough to own a gold stockpile.

But how about the poor countries? The Trilateral Commission, a private group of American, Japanese, and European citizens, speaks eloquently of the "economic disaster" that could befall the 30 poorest nations if the developed world and the suddenly wealthy OPEC nations fail to agree on a crash rescue program.

Everything done so far in the wake of the oil crisis — for the industrial or less developed countries — including the steps taken at the C-20 session, is inadequate or spineless. Untold hazards lie ahead unless there is some alteration in the vast shift of funds demanded by the OPEC nations. That requires lower oil prices.

MACK TRUCKS

A. W. PELLETIER

The appointment of A. W. Pelletier as President, Mack Trucks Canada Limited is announced by the Board of Directors of the company.

Mr. Pelletier, a native of Toronto whose entire career has been in transportation, was formerly Executive Vice-President of Mack Trucks Canada Limited. He joined the company in 1952 and held positions of progressively greater responsibility in all facets of Mack's operations in Canada. In 1970 he was elected a Director.

Mack Trucks Limited produces heavy duty diesel trucks at its recently-expanded assembly plant at Oakville, Ontario. Production of giant off-highway Mack diesel dump trucks will soon commence at the Oakville plant.

High Interest Hits Doman

DUNCAN — U.S. lumber demands were down this spring mainly because of high interest rates, Herb Doman, president of Doman Industries Ltd., said in his six-month financial statement.

The company markets most of its lumber in the U.S. where an anticipated recovery in housing starts hasn't materialized, Doman said.

"Against background of moderate world-wide demand for lumber it has not been possible to pass on the increased cost of doing business, and the company has suffered accordingly," he said.

In comparing the quarter ended April 30, 1974, with the quarter ended April 30, 1973, he noted the company absorbed in the 1974 period more than $100,000 a month in additional costs due to a combination of higher fuel oil charges for export shipping and unfavorable currency exchange rates.

"These costs when added to general cost increases brought about by inflation have had a devastating effect on profit levels," he said.

While sales for the six-month period ending April 30 rose to $21.9 million from $18.4 million in the comparable period of 1973, net earnings declined from $2.5 million to $1.7 million.

However, he had some good news for shareholders.

He announced that a special tax-free dividend of 20 cents per common share would be paid to shareholders of record July 1.

It will be paid July 15 and the stock will go ex-dividend July 11.

The extra is based on the company's 1973 earnings and will come out of the tax-paid undistributed surplus.

SECOND EXCHANGE FOR B.C. AUG. 1

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Stock Exchange and the British Columbia Securities Commission announced Wednesday that agreement has been reached on the creation of a second stock exchange in B.C.

The new exchange, to be known as the Vancouver Curb Exchange, will open Aug. 1, the Vancouver Stock Exchange said in a statement.

The curb exchange will use the facilities of the Vancouver Stock Exchange, listing shares of junior companies which do not meet the listing requirements of the present exchange, the statement says.

The statement says it is the intention of the Vancouver Stock Exchange and the securities commission to disband the over-the-counter market and the interim section of the present exchange.

CHICKS DESTROYED TO KEEP PRICE UP

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. chicken producers have destroyed millions of baby chicks in an effort to improve prices by dramatically reducing supplies, an industry spokesman said today.

George Watts, president of the National Broiler Council, said the action — growing out of fear of losses of the kind cattlemen say they face — would cut consumer supplies during July and August by 10 million pounds a week.

Even so, Watts said, chicken prices are not likely to rise enough to meet cost of production and said further slashes in output are probable later.

Watts testified at a U.S. House hearing that Tyson Foods, the nation's third largest broiler firm, closed its Shelbyvill, Tenn., complex last week and in the process destroyed 800,000 fertilized eggs and smothered 300,000 baby chicks.

It is "common knowledge," he said that other producers are taking similar steps and that millions of chicks have been destroyed.

Testifying earlier about large supplies of beef and pork that have forced prices down to the level that some livestock raisers say they face bankruptcy, Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz said the United States "does not plan to sit idly by and become the dumping ground for the world's surplus meat."

Butz said he is sending a personal emmisary to New Zealand, Australia and Japan to explore voluntary cuts in beef shipments to the U.S.

Winnipeg Records Highest Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — The rate of price increases in Winnipeg during May was the highesst among urban areas surveyed by Statistics Canada.

Ottawa and cities in the Atlantic provinces had the lowest rates of increase.

The details on price rises in cities follow a report last week from Statistics Canada that the consumer price index rose by 1.7 per cent during May. It was the highest one-month increase since the Korean War.

Food accounted for about half the increase in the index and in nine of the 12 urban areas the food index showed the greatest increase of the four major components — food, housing, transportation and clothing.

The city transportation index had the next largest percentage increase. Higher fuel prices had accounted for about one-quarter of the rise in the consumer price index, affecting car operation and home-heating costs.

The urban index rise in each city in May was: Winnipeg, 2.3 per cent; Toronto, 2.1 per cent; Quebec City and Edmonton-Calgary, 1.9 per cent; Saskatoon-Regina, 1.7 per cent; Vancouver and Thunder Bay, Ont. 1.6 per cent; Montreal, 1.5 per cent; Halifax and St. John's, Nfld., 1.4 per cent; Saint John, N.B., 1.3 per cent; and Ottawa, one per cent.

Comparing this May with May, 1973, the consumer price index increased by 10.9 per cent in St. John's; Montreal, 11.8 per cent; Quebec City, 11.6 per cent; Ottawa and Winnipeg, 11.1 per cent; Vancouver and Thunder Bay, 11 per cent; Toronto 10.5 per cent; Saint John, 10.1 per cent; Edmonton-Calgary, 10 per cent; Halifax, 9.9 per cent; and Saskatoon-Regina, 9.1 per cent.

Highlight of the price increases in Vancouver show the transportation index rose by 2.6 per cent as gasoline and new car prices went up. Cocktail prices rose, as did the alcohol and tobacco index — by 1.4 per cent. The food index was up by 2.1 per cent and housing by 1.2 per cent.

'Can't Earn Nickel On Their Savings'

TORONTO (CP) — G. Arnold Hart, chairman of the Bank of Montreal, says inflation is so bad that Canadians can't earn a nickel" on their savings.

He says the interest rate for the average saver would have to be 17 per cent, and much higher for those in higher tax brackets, to get ahead of inflation that is running at an annual rate of 10 per cent or more.

The apparent rate of return on savings, Hart said in a speech to a financial seminar sponsored by the Conference Board in Canada, is "first cut down substantially" by income tax and then "more than wiped out" by inflation.

C. E. Ritchie, president of the Bank of Nova Scotia, said Canada may have problems achieving the high investment program needed by 1980 because of the growing battle between the federal and provincial governments over taxation.

He said that developments from now until 1980 likely will require investment of close to $300 billion. Raising this would be a challenge, but based on experience "it need not be impossible."

But, Ritchie said, he has "great concern over some of the developments" of the last year or so in government attitudes toward resource development, such as mining.

Sea Talk Progress Unlikely

CARACAS (AP) — Most countries were represented today as an historic conference opened to write a new law governing the wealth of the oceans. But there was doubt among some leaders whether there would be any immediate progress.

Five thousand delegates and official observers are attending the third United Nations conference on the law of the sea. Conference president H. S. Amersinghe of Sir Lanka said he was doubtful a comprehensive treaty could be completed at the 2½-month meeting.

"There is so much to do, so little time, and many nations are participating for the first time so they want to express their views," he said.

Previous law-of-the-sea conferences were held in 1958 and 1960.

Poor Eat Dog Food

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As much as one third of the dog and cat food sold in city slums is being eaten by humans, a food study group has told the U.S.senate.

"We also asked . . . whether or not people in the neighborhood thought pet food might be a good buy when food money was short," the food and nutrition experts said.

Most answered that they knew people who bought dog food pretty regularly.

The report said the nation's poor are hungrier now than they were several years ago, despite major advances in government food programs, because inflation is eating up the grocery baskets of the poor faster than the government can fill them.

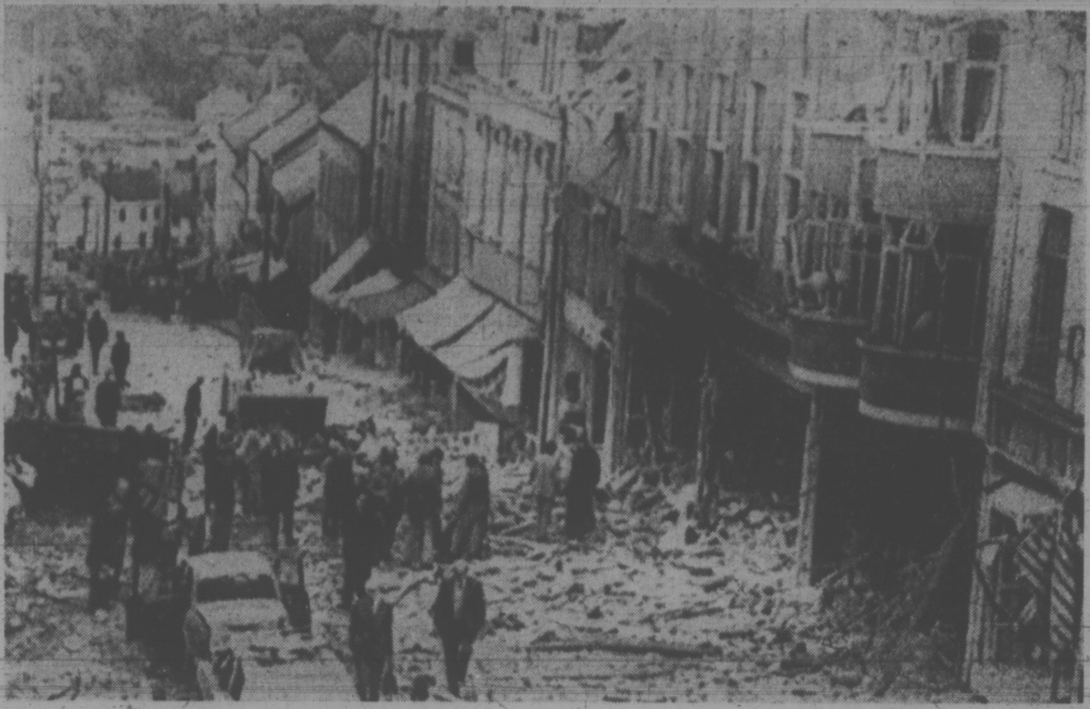
The report cited these cases of hunger:

—A number of children in the Kansas City area were diagnosed to have rickets, which is caused by dietary deficiency.

—Infants in Detroit General Hospital were so visibly undernourished they would either die or spend the rest of their lives with crippling and irreparable disabilities.

—A woman with five children in Decatur, Ala., after housing expenses were deducted from her welfare grant, had only six cents a day per person left for food.

—A Spanish-speaking California farm worker, living amid plenty, watched one of his children die from complications of malnutrition.



THIS IS THE DEVASTATION in Scotch Street, Dungannon, in Northern Ireland, where a 600-pound bomb wrecked 30 business premises. There were no injuries.

Soviet Minister Loses Seat

MOSCOW (WP) — Yekaterina Furtseva, Soviet minister of culture and the highest ranking woman in the Soviet Union, has lost her seat in the Supreme Soviet (parliament), a signal she will probably lose her other titles too.

Western analysts and Soviet sources agreed that Mrs. Furtseva would likely be replaced as minister of culture soon. Every other minister of the Soviet government retained his place in the Supreme Soviet elected Sunday.

Final results of those elections were published Wednesday. The list of results was also the first full published list of candidates. Candidates are handpicked by the regime, and run unopposed. According to the official tally, 99.79 per cent of the voters who represented 99.98 per cent of eligible voters—voted for the unopposed candidates.

If indeed Mrs. Furtseva's political career is over, an unusual saga in Soviet politics has ended. At one time she reached the highest level—membership in the Politburo (then called the presidium) of the Communist Party. As a protege of Nikita S. Khrushchev, she held a place in that body from 1957 to 1961.

Mrs. Furtseva, 64, has been a controversial minister of culture since 1960, a period in which controls on Soviet artists, writers, theatres and film makers has steadily tightened. By reputation she is a heavy drinker and crude talker, though in many trips abroad she has conveyed a genteel image.

The first sign that she was in trouble came this spring, when she was forced to pay more than 60,999 rubles (about $80,000) to the state as reimbursement for work done by a state construction agency on her dacha outside Moscow.

According to credible sources, Mrs. Furtseva built the big dacha with the help of one of Moscow's biggest construction trusts. The director of the organization, it is said, was awarded an important state prize when Mrs. Furtseva was first secretary of the Moscow City Communist Party in the mid-1950s, and felt indebted to her.

She paid 50,000 rubles for the dacha, though its real cost was 110,000 or more.

(Even for 50,000 rubles, no ordinary citizen could get a state construction agency to build him a dacha. This privilege is reserved for important citizens.)

Mercury Bobcat
It does what you want a small car to do.

Economy with a pedigree.
While our little Bobcat just recently arrived in your town, it came complete with a pedigree — it's not just a Bobcat, it's a Mercury Bobcat. With Mercury dealers all across Canada standing behind it.

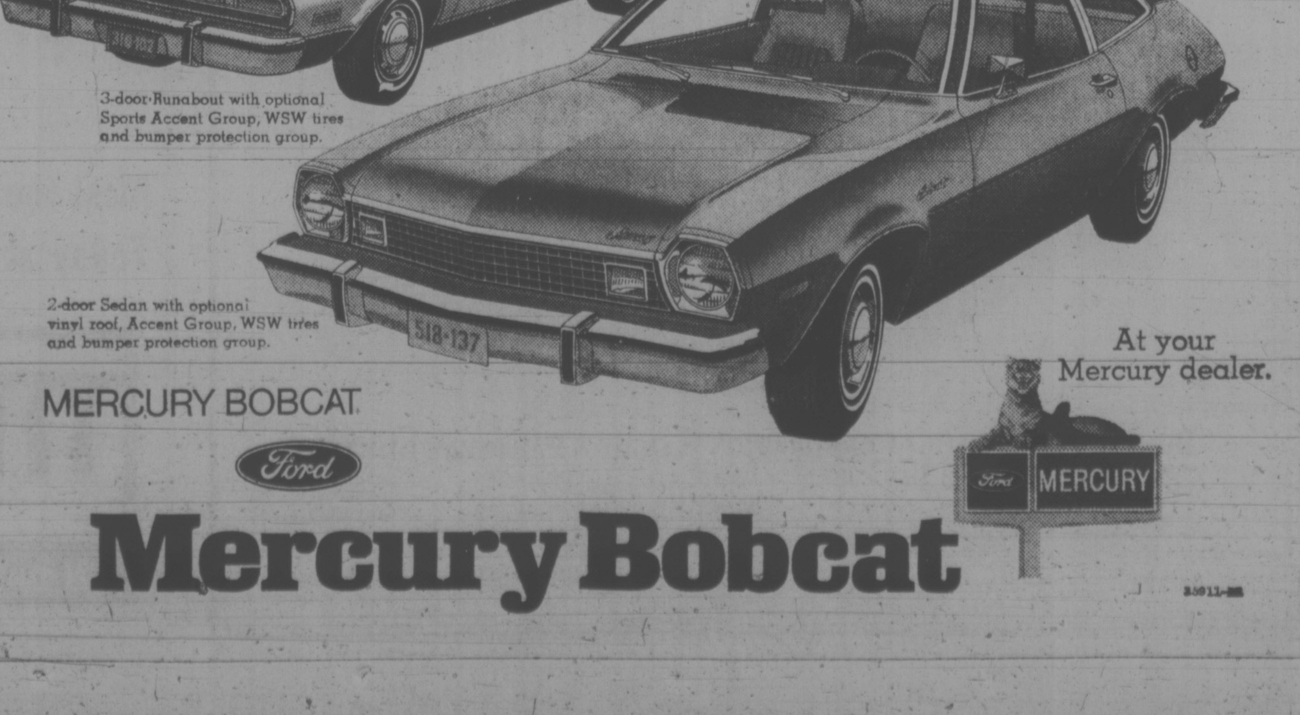
It's a little gasser.
Our new little Bobcat is a frisky little critter with a whole lot of class. It's downright good looking on the outside, roomy and stylish on the inside and makes a little gas go a long way.

A spunky little critter.
To make Bobcat as spunky as its name, we made a 2.0 litre engine standard. But for even more spunk, there's an optional 2.3 litre OHC engine. Either way, combined with the four-speed floor-mounted transmission, Bobcat's engines put plenty of punch in its economy.
And a little car that goes like the Bobcat has to have the same cat-quick stopping power, so Bobcat comes with fade resisting front disc brakes standard.

Only I do it with sass!
GAS

A comfortable feeling.
Our Bobcat's a roomy little critter on the inside. With contoured front bucket seats that are thickly padded for comfort. Plush nylon loop-pile carpeting. And a surprising amount of leg room — both front and back.

Three little Bobcats.
With Bobcat, economy comes to you three ways. You have a choice between a 2-door sedan, a nifty little 3-door Runabout and a big haulin' little station wagon.
Whichever one you choose, you'll find you're getting the pick of the small car litter. At your Mercury dealer.



Station wagon with optional roof rack, Villager options, WSW tires and bumper protection group.

3-door Runabout with optional Sports Accent Group, WSW tires and bumper protection group.

Milk Group Fights For Price Hike

OTTAWA (CP) — Dairymen pressed their case for increased industrial-grade milk prices on two fronts today amid indications that the federal government soon will announce price rises.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan promised representatives of Dairy Farmers of Canada, pressure group for milk men, that he would make a statement on prices for milk used to make butter, cheese, milk powder and ice cream later in the day.

The group met with Mr. Whelan and Consumer Affairs Minister Herb Gray to discuss raising the guaranteed price for industrial milk to $10 from $8.50 for each 100 pounds shortly before Beryl Plumptre, chairman of the food prices review board, convened a day-long hearing with dairymen, government officials, processors and consumer groups to discuss dairy industry problems.

Timing of the two meetings, a board spokesman said, was coincidental.

At the review board hearing, 21 groups submitted briefs on various aspects of the highly complex, stiffly-regulated dairy industry.

Dairymen from all parts of the country warned that dairy production, now dwindling, will drop still further if price increases are not soon granted.

Milk production last year dropped to 16.9 billion pounds from 18.7 billion in 1969. While government policies were aimed at matching domestic production with demand, the country had to import 57 million pounds of butter in 1973.

"The evidence is clear . . . that returns to industrial milk production have been, and continue to be, inadequate," said a brief by the Dairy Farmers of Canada.

The Consumers' Association of Canada, on the other hand, urged more efficient milk production through improved management practices, a less-rigid quota system and long-term government dairy policies.

The latest round of concern over the dairy industry follows by less than three months increases in government guaranteed prices for industrial milk products.

On March 29, the federal government granted price increases that raised the average cost of a pound of butter by six cents to 83 cents and the average cost of skim milk powder to 50 cents, up between 12 and 15 cents a pound.

The increases resulted from a rise to $8.50, up $1.33, in the guaranteed price for each 100 pounds of manufacturing milk sold by dairy farmers.

The changes were designed, Mr. Whelan said, to provide the country's estimated 110,000 manufacturing milk farmers with greater incentives to produce.

They were made up by combining marketplace price increases with yet another boost in government milk subsidies. Direct subsidy payments to industrial milk men were raised to $2.30 for each 100 pounds, a program that added $60 million to the former $150 million in subsidies to dairy farmers.

The review board hearing dwelt with both aspects of milk production—manufacturing milk, which is controlled and regulated by the federal government, and fluid milk, which is regulated by provincial government boards.

About 10 billion of the 17 to 18 billion pounds produced each year goes for industrial uses.

Esquimalt Regatta Friday

The Pacific Maritime Command will hold its annual regatta Friday from 10:45 a.m. to 3:15 p.m. at CFB Esquimalt.

Events will include whaler pulling, sailing races, beer barrel polo, bathtub racing, dispatch boat events and a grapefruit gun competition.

The focal point of activities will be A jetty in the Dockyard with all water events taking place in the harbor in front of the jetty.

Rear-Admiral R. J. Pickford, commander of maritime forces Pacific, will present the prizes on the playing field of Warrant Officers' School.

14 Courses At Museum

A total of 14 recreational courses for young people between the ages of six and 18 will be given by the Provincial Museum this summer.

Courses will begin July 1 and run until the second week in August.

Programs include historic crafts, exploration of sea life, taxidermy, and activities of the early explorers and fur traders.

Persons interested should register at the museum.

HALL PACKED FOR MEETING ON ROSENBERGS

NEW YORK (UPI)—A capacity crowd of 2,800 persons filled Carnegie Hall Monday night to launch a nationwide campaign to clear the names of Ethel and Julius Rosenberg, executed in 1953 for stealing atomic bomb secrets.

The crowd, paying from $3 to $50 for seats, ranged from white-haired, middle-aged couples to youths too young to remember the Rosenbergs' trial in 1951.

Actor Ossie Davis, serving as master of ceremonies, announced at the start of the 2½-hour program, "This hall was sold out days ago and we could have sold it out twice over since."

The Rosenbergs, members of the Communist Party, were accused of masterminding the theft of atomic bomb secrets and delivering them to the Russians.

MENTAL HOME GROUP ARE 'SANE' VOTERS

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — A group of residents from a nearby mental health centre was successful Wednesday in a bid to be included on the voters' list for the federal election.

Allan Roach, returning officer for Simcoe North, said 49 residents of the Edgar occupational centre were listed as voters after they appeared before a revision officer and answered a number of questions.

A spokesman for the psychiatric hospital branch of the Ontario health ministry complained to Chief Electoral Officer Jean-Marc Hamel last week that the residents were being denied the right to vote by Roach's refusal to numerate at mental health centres.

Roach said the 49 patients appeared with medical certificates attesting to their sanity. He demanded the certificates because the election act prohibits from voting "every person who is restrained of his liberty of movement or deprived of the management of his property by reason of mental illness."

Drunk Trials Televised

MOSCOW (AFP) — Televised broadcasts of the trials of alcoholics have helped cut alcoholism in one Soviet city by more than half, the Communist party newspaper Pravda reported today.

Pravda said "several dozen notorious alcoholics" were made to attend the trial in Minsk of a factory worker sentenced to two years imprisonment for alcoholism.

The worker was accused of "returning home daily drunk, scandalous behavior on the public highway and beating his wife and children."

The trial was televised and photographs were put up in all popular parts of the district. The result, Pravda said, was that 96 out of 140 known alcoholics in the district took the pledge.

Fleet of N-Ships Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Maritime Administration has stirred the interest of at least five shipbuilders in a proposal to start a fleet of nuclear-powered merchant ships— the first such American craft since the world-pioneering but now-decommissioned Savannah.

But the agency has not received an appropriation from Congress—or even approval for a go-ahead—on its proposal to build at least three ships under a government-subsidized program.

The ships would cost at least $100 million each, including up to 50 per cent in federal subsidies.

The Atomic Energy Commission said Wednesday:

"The first ship is expected to be delivered by mid-1980 with the remaining two ships to follow at approximately one-year intervals. Successful completion of the program may result in a fleet of 100 to 500 nuclear powered ships."

The Savannah, which began regular commercial service in 1965, was taken out of service in 1970 because, a commerce department spokesman said, "most of what could be learned from operation of the vessel had been learned."

A Maritime Administration spokesman said "nuclear technology has come a long way" since the days of the Savannah and that now, with bunker-oil for non-nuclear vessels costing $15 a barrel, compared with $3 only a few years ago, nuclear power for merchant craft "starts to look better and better."

Toyota has the lowest priced popular† small car: $2599*

COROLLA 1200 KE020KB

Two thousand five hundred and ninety-nine dollars.

We think that's a lot of money to pay for any car. But we also think it's the best bargain in town.

Here's why:

Lowest priced of all popular† small cars.

Economy has to begin with price. (But it shouldn't end there.)

And when you compare prices, one fact stands out: of the 10 best selling small cars in Canada, Toyota has the lowest priced model. The Toyota Corolla 1200 KE020KB.

Now check the dollar difference between Toyota and some of the other popular economy models.

Model	Displacement c.c./Net H.P.	Lowest Priced Model* (Manufacturer's suggested list prices)	Difference
TOYOTA	1200/65	$2,599	—
Vega	2300/75	$2,927	$328
Pinto	2000/	$2,832	$233
Datsun	1300/	$2,965	$366
VW	1600/46	$2,995	$396

 Net H.P. figure not released.

Need we say more?

Yes.

Best gas mileage of all popular† small cars.

A recent survey of small car buyers asked Canadians how they went about shopping for an economy car.

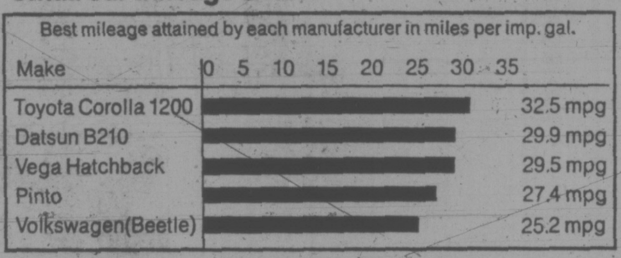
Not surprising, the two most important considerations were price and gas mileage.

Now consider this:

The Toyota Corolla 1200 is not only the lowest priced model of the popular small cars.

It's also the one that goes the farthest on a gallon of gas.

Small car mileage chart.



These figures are from the Environmental Protection Agency—a U.S. government body that tested 486 different vehicles to determine gas mileage. And in the E.P.A. Gas Mileage Study of '74 models, the Toyota Corolla 1200 averaged 32.5 miles per imperial gallon. The best gas mileage of the 10 best selling small cars in Canada. (Of course your own mileage may vary depending on road conditions and the way you drive.)

Economy. And much more.

Still not satisfied?

Good.

Because, with today's shrinking dollar, an economy car should offer you a lot more. Not only good price and good gas mileage. But good value right down the line.

That's why even the lowest priced Toyota models come equipped with a wide range of extras ...like front disc brakes, four-on-the-floor transmission, and fully reclining bucket seats.

Where many car manufacturers list these as extra cost options, they're all standard equipment on every Toyota.

22 beautiful ways to save.

At Toyota, the big option is choice.

We give you a wider selection of small cars than any other manufacturer: 22 models in 6 different series.

And they're not only different in size. They're different in character.

Change your car. Not your lifestyle.

Now more than ever, the small car is the car of the future.

Which brings us right back to the beginning. $2599.*

Western Rail Upgrading Promised by Marchand

BY VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Railway access from the prairies to British Columbia and to Thunder Bay would be up-graded including strengthened rail roadbeds, and some double tracking Transport Minister Jean Marchand promised Wednesday in a press conference, elaborating on the Liberals' transport election program.

The government would also launch, he said, a comprehensive program to improve railway access to the ports of Vancouver and Prince Rupert. In the west in some sections there would be eventually the electrification of some of the lines.

The transport minister acknowledged that the sweeping changes the Liberal party was promising the electorate if it was returneed to power, would take many years to bring to completion. He answered numerous questions raised by the new policy platform. He said there were no plans to take over the British Columbia Railway.

He denied that the proposed new crown corporation — Canadian Passenger Transportation Corporation — would expropriate the railbeds or right of ways. He said that the government agency that will administer the vast new program would negotiate with the Canadian National Railways for use of the railway lines.

This new corporation will finance and manage the operation of all inter-city passenger trains and will ensure with provincial co-operation, the arranging and financing of high quality bus systems in areas not now adequately served by existing carriers.

Marchand could not place a complete estimate on the cost although he said it had been roughly estimated at $1.7 billion in five years.

Marchand said there were three major priorities he and his advisers had kept in mind when devising the ambitious new policy.

Third in his list of priorities is "removal of regional inequities in freight rates,"

He said it had been demonstrated during the past six years that the principle of competition on which Canadian freight rates has been based, that is, competition between different modes of transport supposedly resulting in fair and low rates, has not worked for many areas in Canada.

"The Liberal government will adopt the principle of consistent and equitable pricing of freight rates rather than the old 'what the traffic will bear' principle," said the minster.

"This will be a dramatic change and the government intends to monitor the implementation very carefully to cushion shippers and carriers from abrupt change," he added.

Marchand was questioned as to this being "just another election promise," He denied vigorously that it was devised just for the election. He pointed out that he was on record in parliament as having stated Canada had no transportation policy and that he was working on a new concept. This was it and the fact it was announced during an election was plus for the Liberal, he claimed.

He said that the documents presented to the press conference were Liberal Party documents paid for by the party and not government of Canada transport department documents.

A transportation Information act will be introduced to ensure government access to all necessary information upon which to base freight rates policy and take over government action, he said.

The minister said a first priority of the new policy is people and their need for better passenger transportation.

ICEBREAKER CARGO SHIPS IN NEW LIBERAL PLANS

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A Liberal government re-elected July 8 would attempt to make Canada the first country in the world to build and operate icebreaker cargo ships, for plying Canada's Arctic waters, according to Transport Minister Jean Marchand.

As one small part of the Liberal party's proposed new transportation policy, Marchand Wednesday revealed that a Liberal government will "encourage" the design and manufacture in Canada of "ice-strengthened cargo carriers and icebreakers which will fly the Canadian flag and operate in Canadian Arctic waters."

When asked how Ottawa would "encourage" such activities, Marchand explained that Canada has already done research on the idea.

He later added that he believes the government will probably build at least the first such ice-breaker cargo vessels — probably as prototypes — and that a Liberal government would begin preparations to this end "as soon as possible."

He told a news conference that the Liberal Party proposal did not have in mind any specific cargo for such icebreaker cargo ships namely oil and minerals.

But the proposal is reminiscent of a scheme researched by a West German consortium about a year and a half ago, whereby ice-strengthened and possibly ice-breaker cargo ships would be used to remove iron ore and other minerals from recently-discovered deposits in the Canadian Arctic.

In a related part of the proposed transportation policy, a Liberal government would support "the gradual re-birth of a Canadian merchant Marine based initially on the reserving of Canada's coastal and Arctic trade to Canadian registered vessels."

STOL Left Out Of Grit Plans

OTTAWA (FP) — STOL, the short take-off and landing aircraft technology Canada is supposed to be grooming into a future world export commodity, is conspicuous in its total absence from the Liberal Party's new transportation policy proposals unveiled as a package yesterday by Transport Minister Jean Marchand.

And from what Marchand said yesterday about inter-city travel by train and bus being cheaper than inter-city travel by air, it seems a Liberal government would continue to take a "wait and see attitude" about the domestic and export transportation and economic propects of the STOL system to be tested between Ottawa and Montreal starting next month.

And some observers here even suggest that the failure to even mention STOL, let alone provide support for the new Canadian-developed system, could end up undercutting the chances of success for the system in Canada and abroad.

From what is contained in the Liberal Party's transportation policy proposals, it would seem that STOL's two major competitors — rapid bus and especially rapid train intercity service — will be receiving major federal support, if the Liberals are re-elected.

Charn Dhillon, who scored three Shamrock goals, fires shot at Coquitlam goalie Greg Thomas

Rocks' Snipers Find the Range

By MAX LOW

Times Staff

It was pretty obvious — Victoria Shamrocks just had to do something about their scoring output.

Victoria is the lowest-scoring club in the Western Lacrosse Association and the Rocks have been losing too many close ones through lack of goals.

They decided to do something about it Wednesday night at Memorial Arena.

Going on a wild scoring spree, that produced six straight goals at the start and a 9-1 lead after the first period, the Rocks held on to beat Coquitlam Adanacs 16-11.

It was one more goal than the Shamrocks' previous highest score this season and enabled them to snap a tie with the Adanacs and move to within two points of second-place Vancouver Burrards.

It didn't matter that the Adanacs came back strongly and outscored the Shamrocks 5-4 in the second period and 5-3 in the third. What mattered was that the Rocks played well enough and finished off their plays well enough in the first period and didn't wilt or didn't give up too many goals on foolish penalties.

After all, the Rocks have done both of those things already this season. They enjoyed a 5-0 lead when they visited Coquitlam but faded and allowed the Adanacs to come from behind for a 16-15 victory.

There were one or two anxious moments in the third period and fans feared the same kind of thing just might happen again when the Adanacs closed the gap from 13-6 to 15-10. But that incredible first-period lead was too much to surmount.

Victoria was like a team possessed. The Rocks rushed onto the floor and took their opponents by storm. Passes clicked, shots were sharp and the goals piled up.

Soon it was 6-0 and it might have been more but for three cheap penalties against Mike Beaulac (for slashing, cross-checking and then for delay-of-game after he got mad and tossed the ball away). John Allen scored moments later to end the Rocks' run. It was the first of four goals for Allen and it could easily have been the first of three straight power-play goals for the visitors.

But instead, Jim Browne scored a short-handed goal after a great piece of hustling by Ivan Thompson and Nirmal Dillon and an early comeback bid by Coquitlam had been thwarted.

That was the big difference for the Rocks over most of their other games this season — hustle and plenty of it. This time it was the Rocks, and not their opponents, who were in the right place to pick up most of the rebounds and were fast enough in moving into the open spaces to collect the passes.

Milt MacNeil, having by far his best game since coming here from the East, and Thompson were fantastic. MacNeil opened the game with two goals within a 17-second burst and went on to score two more goals and add two assists while Thompson racked up 10 points with two goals and eight assists.

Unfortunately, a fine game was spoiled by the ending, which came 30 seconds early after a bench-emptying brawl. It started when Chris Hall knocked Coquitlam goalkeeper Greg Thomas flat on his face.

When Thomas limped back to the bench, Jim Rickbeil stormed out and sailed into Hall. Before they could get room to start sparring, all the players of both teams were involved. But if didn't last long and, when things settled down again, the game was called.

Dale's Back on Course In New Ladies' Look

Cedar Hill has never played better, and neither, perhaps, has Dale Shaw. It's ladies week at Cedar Hill, ending Friday, the first time the City and District tournament has ever been held at the municipal course. And it looks like a five-time sweep for the pretty 27-year-old titleholder.

There's no doubt that Dale is No. 1 in town, even if a fifth triumph tomorrow won't even put her close to the all-time record of city golf victories. Margaret Todd, the newest Island member to the B.C. Hall of Fame, has that honor, having won the coveted Begg Motor Co. cup a total of 11 times between 1940 and 1963. If the 1940 designation lists Margaret Sutcliffe as the winner, that's all right. Because that's Marg Todd too.

But now it's another era, and Miss Shaw demands attention and, is playing, in her words, "much better."

"I'm hitting the ball further, and my game is much improved," she said Wednesday after disposing of 15-year-old Sidney Thomson of Colwood, 6 and 5.

"I've rebuilt my game," she explained, "or rather I should say, 'Ernie Tate (professional at Marsh Meadows), has helped me to rebuild it.'

"I needed it," she added with complete candor, "because I had a bad year last year."

Last year Dale didn't make selection to the B.C. interprovincial team, a major disappointment. This season she is sitting No. 2 in the trials behind Marilyn Palmer.

Last year was also the time when Dale was selected to play for Canada in the team matches in Australia. She finished with a plus in team play, winning two and losing two in the singles, and winning two, losing one and getting a half in the twoball, even if she did fail to qualify for the amateur.

Work Days Long Days on Tour

'Toughest part of the tour of what she describes as 'a wonderful country, much like Canada', was the length of the working day and then standing up for a couple of hours at a cocktail party that night," she said.

But now it's another season with major tournaments ahead. The PNGA is first in Seattle in July. Then, of course there is the big plum right next door as well. The U.S. Amateur is in Seattle in August.

Dale also plans to make all the usual stops en route to what she hopes will be selection to Canada's team for the Commonwealth matches next year.

"Sure, she's much the best," said Cedar Hill pro Bill Goldsworthy. "She's too strong and is hitting the ball well. She's only three over for three days (this was Wednesday) including her course record of 65 Monday. That's good golf."

But that honor—a new course mark—is not an entirely new feeling for Dale, either. She holds the Glen Meadows mark of 75, one under par, and "in my best round ever" she shot a 71, four under par, at Niakwa in Winnipeg, which later was equalled by Carol Semple, the reigning U.S. and U.K. Amateur champion.

A Who's Who From the Past

If that's distinguished company, there's more, especially in an exercise in instant nostalgia. For inscribed on the old Begg Cup, now retired in favor of the brand new CFAX trophy, are names that read like a who's who in city women's golf over the past half century.

Since 1920 in fact. That's when Mrs. H. Paterson of Victoria Club first took the honors, repeating in 1922 and 1925. Marjorie Todd won in 1930; Mrs. E. Jackson of Uplands, later a B.C. champion, was victorious in 1935. Mrs. Derek Rhys Jones (Mrs. Matson) won in 1950; Shirley Naysmith had a five-year record of success, Joan Lawson three, the same number for Mrs. Art Dowell . . . and now it's a brand new game. And in more ways than one.

In selling the change (and also the radio station) CFAX vice president Keith Dagg explained they just wanted to get more involved, perhaps give the girls a better deal, and eventually work towards an Island ladies championship. There is none by that title at present. "We've enjoyed our association with the Men's Island Open," he said, "and really there wasn't much of a prize list for the ladies before for a week's work. So we tried to help."

"Dale, for instance, got a $15 script in 1970 for winning; she got a $15 script in 1971, the same in 1972 . . . and as the men always get good prizes why shouldn't the women? Down in the flights winner got $5 worth."

This year, for the first time, they never had it so good, or got so much attention from the media. Naturally, the new look brought smiles all round.

But they also got caught up with an accompanying problem. They got the bathwater with the baby. And it does bother Dagg. For in any upgrading there must be the players.

This year there was a dearth of juniors in the championships and a shortage of younger women players as well.

Now the big questions are: Where were they? And why?

Corker of a Win

Don Corker skipped his Oak Bay rink of jBob Stewart (second) and Bill Clark (lead) to victory in the Adshed Trophy lawn bowling competition Wednesday on the Canadian Pacific Club greens.

The trio finished with a 3-0 record in the one-day event for men 80 years of age and over.

A host club threesome, consisting of skip Bill Gilmour, second Art Plewman and lead Bert Arscott, finished seoond with a 2-1 record.

Jim Edward's Victoria West crew was third and Roy Chambers' trio from Victoria finished fourth.

A total of 42 bowlers, five over the age of 90, took part in the tournament. Their ages added up to a total of 3,476 years.

LEAVING for Toronto today was Victoria's Glen Bradshaw, who is one of 16 players picked for intensive training program leading to selection of Canadian junior tennis team. Following June 21-July 1 series of clinics and trials, at least four players will be chosen for month-long tour of junior events in U.S.

Junior League Thinks 'Pro' To Avoid Under-Age Draft

By JIM CRERAR

Times Staff

The Western Canada Junior Hockey League turning professional? It's not as far fetched as you might think.

League president Ed Chynoweth of Saskatoon raised the point Wednesday night on the eve of a series of meetings here among WCHL club operators that could last until next Tuesday.

Top item on the agenda is finding a way to keep the expanding National Hockey League and World Hockey Association from drafting under-age juniors, some as young as 17, and signing them to professional contracts.

Until this year's draft, the pros agreed not to sign players until they had completed their junior eligibility at age 20.

But this spring, through a special agreement with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, the pros drafted seven under-age juniors from the WCHL and 21 from the country's other two Junior "A" major leagues, the Ontario Hockey Association and the Quebec Junior League. No under-age players were taken from Victoria Cougars.

Junior operators across Canada agree they can't stay in business if they're going to lose their 17- and 18-year-olds.

The agreement between the Junior "A" majors and the CAHA ended May 31 and Chynoweth was asked Wednesday if there is a chance the WCHL will go "outlaw" to protect itself from the inroads the pros have made.

"I think that's a possibility," he replied, "but I say it with reservations. Independent might be a better word. If the CAHA wanted to have an agreement with the pros and we didn't think it was acceptable, then we would have no recourse but to go independent or pro.

"We want to stay under the umbrella of the CAHA because we feel we have an obligation to them, their branches and minor hockey," Chynoweth added. "But if they're not prepared to help us in our fight for our existence, then we have no recourse but to go independent."

The WCHL took that route four years ago and Chynoweth said it was successful. He added that the OHA and QHL would probably go along with the idea if an alternate solution could not be found.

The WCHL has a salary limit of $75 a week per player but Chynoweth did not see salaries as a major problem.

"We would have to change our whole concept of the standard player's contract," he explained. "It wouldn't be a contract as it is now understood. The players would be serving an apprenticeship in hockey."

What about the age limit?

"We could be flexible here to the point of allowing players up to the age of 22, perhaps offering four years of university," Chynoweth replied.

Whatever comes out of the Victoria meetings, Chynoweth is anxious to co-operate with the Ontario and Quebec leagues.

"We've got them on our side and now we've got to stand together and hammer out a common solution," he said. "We could be the greatest developer leagues the NHL or WHA ever had, compared to what they pay to develop players through minor professional hockey. But they've got to be prepared to play ball with us and pay for the development.

"We're caught in the middle of a power struggle (between the NHL and WHA). We're not trying to rob them. We're just trying to stay in business."

Two other items on the agenda are realignment and an application to enter the league by 10 Thunder Bay businessmen headed by lawyer Jim Johnson.

There are three proposals on realignment: (1) A seven-team division consisting of Victoria, Kamloops, New Westminster, Edmonton, Calgary, Medicine Hat and Lethbridge and a five-team division of Saskatoon, Regina, Brandon, Flin Flon and Winnipeg; (2) One 12-team division; (3) Move Edmonton or Medicine Hat from the present Western Division to the East.

Although Chynoweth would not comment on the Thunder Bay application, word is that present league members want a travel subsidy from the new club to play there.

Tempers Force Early Decision

Frayed tempers forced plate umpire Dave Fitzgerald to call an early halt to Wednesday's Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League game at Heywood Avenue Park.

It wound up as a six-inning, 5-0 victory for Mike's Sport Shop over the last-place Labatts.

Tempers flared in the bottom of the seventh when batter Bob McFarland of Labatts exchanged words with catcher Bob Butterworth.

Jim Sharpe, in the on-deck circle, also became involved and when the Labatt player later responded to remarks coming from the Mike's bench, Fitzgerald called a halt to the game.

In an exhibition game at Central Park, Bate Construction of the Northwest International League blanked Century Inn 6-0 behind the four-hit pitching of Dave Ruthowsky.

Combos Retain One-Point Lead

Esquimalt Combos and CJVI Vicettes maintained their one-two positions atop the Victoria Senior Women's Softball League by scoring victories Wednesday night at Hyacinth Park.

Combos stayed one point ahead by tripping Ingraham Hotel 8-5 while the Vicettes trounced View Royal 16-1 on an adjacent diamond.

Marilyn Sluggett pitched Combos to victory and received strong batting support from Doreen Newton (three-for-four) and Sally Poulson (two for three).

Rosemary Fuller recorded the Vicette win as clubmates Lori Skinner and Jan Crook produced home runs.

Both Sides Mum As Football Talks Resume

By The Canadian Press

Representatives of the Canadian Football League owners and the players' association were to sit down at the bargaining table in Winnipeg today for a resumption of talks that broke off last weekend.

At issue are the players' demands for increased payments for training camps, pre-season games and playoff games and pension funds.

Most members of the players' association have, in effect, been on strike since the weekend when they voluntarily retired. They plan to end their retirements as soon as the dispute is settled.

Neither side has given much indication of whether they expect an early end to the dispute which would allow the veterans to return to training camps where most clubs' rookies have been working out this week.

The CFL owners, with the exception of Ottawa Rough Riders, have stood firm on their decision to refuse the striking veterans use of training facilities.

In Ottawa, the Rider players are preparing for their June 26 match against the league all-stars at Lansdowne Park. The Riders, who have not yet renewed their lease at Lansdowne, found they couldn't effectively bar the veterans from training there.

George Reed of Saskathewan Roughriders, president of the players' association, said earlier this week it would have been in the owners' best interests to allow the players use of facilities.

Most of the more than 270 veteran players who retired last Saturday have been staging light workouts of their own without the benefit of coaches or facilities.

Perfumo's Goal an Odious Touch

FRANKFURT — Italy, one of the favorites to win the 1974 World Cup, was lucky to escape with a 1-1 tie against far superior Argentina in a Group 4 match Wednesday night.

An unfortunate own goal by Argentine captain Roberto Perfumo when the South Americans were leading 1-0 robbed them of a deserved victory.

Argentine commanded the mid-field and handed Italy a soccer lesson throughout but just couldn't get the goal that would make up for that one costly mistake.

It came when Argentine goalkeeper Daniel Carnevali came out to snatch a loose ball and Perfumo turned to tap it back to the keeper but sent it past him into the net.

Now everything in Group 4 depends on Sunday's clash between Italy and Poland, which shocked Argentina 3-2 Saturday and hammered hapless Haiti 7-0 Wednesday night.

Argentina is likely to defeat Haiti handily Sunday and if that happens then Italy must beat the Poles to ensure advancement. Argentina will qualify only if Italy loses to Poland. A draw in that game would make Poland and Italy the two teams from Group 4 through to the second round.

In Group 1, West Germany is through to the second round, whatever the result of Saturday's match with East Germany. Australia is out and the remaining spot will be taken by either East Germany or Chile.

Brazil, the defending champion, Yugoslavia and Scotland will battle it out for the two qualifying places in Group 2. Zaire is out of it.

It's still open in Group 3, but Uruguay appears to have a tougher task than Holland, Sweden or Bulgaria.

Sweden and Holland fought out a bruising scoreless draw before a capacity crowd at Dortmund, with 30,000 Dutch fans in attendance. It was the second successive scoreless game for Sweden and the fourth of the tournament.

Holland, so impressive in beating Uruguay 2-0 in its opening game, leads Group 3 by a point over Sweden and Bulgaria, with Uruguay a further point behind.

Road to Stardom Lacks Appeal For a Changed Brenda Cameron

THE TENNIS SCENE

By Max Low

Two years ago, they were hailing Brenda Cameron as Canada's tennis star of the future.

Nothing was beyond her reach, the experts said; a national women's title, appearances at Wimbledon, both were possible.

Now they're not so sure — and neither is Brenda.

All that praise those two seasons back was well earned.

Strongly-built, Brenda was already getting a lot of speed on the ball with both backhand and forehand ground strokes and was angling the shots beautifully on her volleys for one so young.

She went to Burnaby and took the Canadian junior championships by storm, winning the national closed 14-and -under title and finishing runner-up in the open singles.

Two years later, Brenda is still playing good tennis. She's hitting the same powerful kind of ground strokes and volleying crisply. In fact, she's top-seeded in the annual Racquet Club of Victoria championships, which end Saturday. And, apart from a bit of opposition from steady Sandra Moss and third-seeded Sally Hemeon, she shouldn't have much trouble winning the women's singles.

But in those two years, the young tennis star hasn't progressed as much as she had been expected to. She hasn't really lived up to all that promise and there are several reasons.

One reason, Brenda will tell you, is the lack of indoor facilities here to enable juniors to train and play tennis all-year round.

"They have these facilities over in Vancouver and the young players there are improving rapidly because of them," she says. "Many juniors, too, are going down regularly to the U.S. and each year I fall a little more behind them."

But the main reason for the lack of progress lies in Brenda herself and in her tennis philosophy.

You sit down in the sun on the steps at the Racquet Club chatting to Brenda and soon you realize she has changed quite a lot.

For one thing, she has shed her "bad-girl" image and is now quiet and reserved and smiles a lot.

"Oh, I used to yell all the time at myself on the court and get terribly upset," she admits with a grin. "But I've given up completely on all that — it's not worth it." To get rid of temper tantrums in sport is good, but in controlling her emotions, it's just possible that Brenda has snuffed out a little of the fire that once produced a national champion and a little of the desire to become something even greater.

"I'd like to get a lot better, but I don't want to be great," is the way Brenda puts it in a nutshell. "I mean I don't want to go in for money or that — I mean I never could."

Brenda, who turned 16 last week, is ranked No. 2 in B.C. and No. 6 in Canada among girls 16-and-under. She hopes to go to Ottawa for this year's national junior championships.

But beyond that, the tennis future is hazy.

"I'd love to be Canadian women's champion and to play at Wimbledon," she says distantly, ". . . but I just don't think it's possible, that's all."

And Brenda, wearing her "Happiness Is Tennis" tee-shirt, takes the court for another tournament match. She's a happier girl now and just enjoying her tennis.

Perhaps, in this day of desperate drive for prizes and money in sport, Brenda Cameron has found something more precious.

Top Two Seeds Fall in Tennis

NOTTINGHAM (AP) — John Newcombe and Ilie Nastase, the top two seeds, were upset by Americans Roscoe Tanner and Marty Riessen Wednesday in the third round of the $100,000 John Player tennis tournament.

Tanner ousted top-seeded Newcombe, 8-6, 6-4, and Riessen sidelined Nastase, the Romanian ace, 6-3, 9-8.

MacGregor Joined By Big M in WHA

By The Canadian Press

Toronto Toros scheduled a news conference today but the news already is out—Frank Mahovlich has signed a contract with the World Hockey Association club.

"I signed for four years and I'm happy," the 36-year-old former National Hockey League star said in an interview Wednesday.

Mahovlich, jumping from Montreal Canadiens, was one of two big names from the NHL to join the WHA Wednesday. Bruce MacGregor, New York Rangers' leading scorer in this year's Stanley Cup playoffs, joined the WHA Edmonton Oilers.

MacGregor, 33, told a news conference in Edmonton he had chosen to join the Oilers "because this is home."

Mahovlich's move had been expected for some time and Montreal left him unprotected in last week's expansion draft.

The Toros apparently will not be announcing the signing of Pete Mahovlich, Frank's younger brother.

"I haven't talked to him for a while but it looks like he won't move," the Big M said of his younger brother.

If the Toros play next season in Maple Leaf Gardens, Mahovlich will be returning to the arena where he won NHL rookie-of-the-year honors in 1957-58.

The Big M, who has a home and two travel agency offices in Toronto, spent 11 seasons with the Leafs before he was traded to Detroit Red Wings in 1968.

His best goal-scoring season came in 1968-69 with the Wings when he scored 49 but his best points production was 1971-72 with Montreal when he had 43 goals and 53 assists.

Mahovlich is Toros' third NHL player acquisition in recent weeks. Earlier they landed left-winger Paul Henderson of the Leafs and right-winger Tony Featherstone of Minnesota North Stars.

MacGregor, a former captain of the Edmonton Oil Kings juniors, played 10 seasons with Detroit before he was traded to the Rangers in 1971.

He became the third player to leave the Rangers since the playoffs. Ranger captain Vic Hadfield was traded to Pittsburgh Penguins and Jim Nielsen was allowed to be drafted in a deal involving California Golden Seals and Boston Bruins in which the Bruins gave New York Derek Sanderson.

Troubles in the Doubles

Seeded players advanced with little trouble in the singles but there were a few shocks in the doubles when the Racquet Club of Victoria's annual tennis championships continued Wednesday night.

Top-seeded Greg Miller breezed past Edgar Rhomberg 6-0, 6-1 and third-seeded Joe Lachmund also reached the semi-finals with a 6-3, 7-5 win over Phil Blake.

Top-ranked Brenda Cameron crushed Brigitte Buck 6-0, 6-0 to reach the semi-finals along with second-seeded Sandra Moss, who beat Andrie Levey 6-4, 6-4, third-seeded Sally Hemeon, who got past Jennifer Bland and fourth-ranked Nina Bland, who downed Sue Lembcke 6-1, 6-2.

But things weren't quite as smooth for the seeds in the men's and women's doubles.

Hartley and veteran Ted Smythe came back strongly to surprise fourth-seeded Derek Wild and Kemble Greenwood 2-6, 6-1, 6-0 and reach the semi-finals of the men's event. And in the women;s doubles, unseeded Miss Moss and Renata von Ilberg upset third-seeded Corina and Jennifer Bland to make it to the semis.

The tourney continues tonight and Friday night with finals set for Saturday.

Cedar Hill Retains Title With Final-Round Surge

Cedar Hill retained the Willie Park Driver — emblematic of Victoria District Golf League supremacy — by the narrowest possible margin following final matches Wednesday.

Cedar Hill, which finished nine points ahead of Gorge Vale last season, scored an 8-1 decision over visiting Glen Meadows to overcome a two-and-one-half point deficit and edge Uplands for the title by half a point.

Uplands could only eke out a narrow 5-4 victory over host Gorge Vale, which finished in a tie for third with Glen Meadows.

Royal Colwood won 5½-3½ at Victoria in the other final-round encounter.

Uplands lost a share of first place through a rarity.

Gorge Vale's Cec Ferguson and Dave Mick halved 18 straight holes against Mike Buckley and Bob Hunt of Uplands in the four-ball competition to split the point. Buckley downed Ferguson 1-up in their match while Hunt and Mick battled to a draw.

Uplands was on the losing end of three 1-up decisions when Steve Allen nipped Keith Burrell, professional Earl Davies slipped past Tad McDiarmid and Grant Milliken edged Ian Anderson.

Blast by Burrows All Derek Needed

Walt Burrows slugged a lead-off home run over the left-field fence Wednesday night to give Greaves Movers a 1-0 victory over Gorge Hotel in a Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League game at Lambrick Park.

The homer, second of the season for Burrows, ruined a fine pitching performance by Bob Mabee, who struck out eight batters while allowing only two hits and two walks.

Derek Drinkwater boosted his record to four wins and three losses by hurling a five-hitter for the shutout victory.

Daffy Base Running And No-Hitter, Too

Times News Services

Steve Busby of Kansas City Royals pitched the first no-hitter of the 1974 baseball season Wednesday night but Los Angeles Dodgers and San Francisco Giants stole a share of the spotlight with some of the spotlight with some of the daffiest base running in years.

Busby, a second-year player, missed a perfect game by one when he walked George Scott as the Royals downed Milwaukee Brewers 2-0 in an American League game before 9,019 in Milwaukee.

Last year Busby tossed a no-hitter at Detroit Tigers. Wednesday he got brilliant fielding support when right fielder Al Cowens made diving catches in the second and fourth innings and second baseman cookie Rojas snared a hard smash in a dive-and-whirl play in the eighth.

In other AL games, Texas Rangers beat the Tigers 4-2 in 11 innings, Baltimore Orioles shaded Minnesota Twins 6-5, Chicago White Sox dumped Cleveland Indians 15-4, New York Yankees edged California Angels 2-1 and Boston Red Sox needed 11 innings to beat Oakland Athletics 2-1.

In the National League, the Dodgers were unbelievable on the basepaths in a 7-3 loss to Pittsburgh Pirates. the Giants weren't much better, but they won 5-4 over St. Louis Cardinals.

Elsewhere in the NL, Montreal Expos beat Cincinnati Reds 4-2, San Diego Padres got a one-hitter from rookie Dan Spillner in a 1-0 win over Chicago Cubs, Atlanta Braves downed New York Mets 5-0 and Philadelphia Phillies edged Houston Astros 5-4.

At Pittsburgh, the Dodgers had Lee Lacy on third, Jimmy Wynn on second and Ron Cey at first with two out in the first. Pirate pitcher Jerry Reuss delivered a 3-and-2 pitch to Joe Ferguson, who thought it was strike three. So did catcher Manny Sanguillan, who flipped the ball back to the mound.

And so did Lacy, who left third base and jogged to the Dodger Dugout.

But umpire Dave Davidson called it ball four.

Wynn, now on third, took off for home. Reuss picked up the ball, threw to Sanguillan and Wynn was tagged out at the plate. Then Sanguillan relayed the ball to Richie Hebner at third, who touched the bag.

STEVE BUSBY
. . . no-hit form

Lacy, watching it all from the dugout, suddenly dashed to the plate Hebner threw to Sanguillan, who tagged Lacy.

When the dust had risen, chief umpire Ed Sudol ruled Wynn was out because he touched home, thereby technically passing Lacy on the basepath. But Lacy, who started it all, was entitled to home because the bases-loaded walk made him immune to the tag.

In St. Louis, Garry Maddox of the Giants was on first with Ed Goodson up. Goodson flied to deep centre and outfielder Balke McBride appeared to catch the ball. But it fell out of his glove over the wall.

Maddox stopped at second but, thinking the ball was caught, then retreated to first. A stadium attendant, meanwhile, tossed the ball back onto the field.

When all this was going on, Goodson passed the retreating Maddox between first and second and was called out. Maddox then reversed directions a second time and ran all the way home. Goodson was credited with a run-scoring single.

Hawks Jolt Roadrunners

COQUITLAM — Richmond Roadrunners received a jolt here Wednesday night in their bid to move closer to second-place Victoria McDonalds in the Pacific Junior 'A' Lacrosse League when they dropped a 13-10 decision to last-place Coquitlam J-Hawks.

Richmond held a 39-36 advantage in shots but couldn't cope with the shooting of J-Hawks' John Miller and Jim Insley, each with three goals. George Musseau and Gary Holt added two apiece. Tops for Richmond was Brian Tasker with three.

It's Dale vs. the Rest

If golf followers didn't suspect it before the Victoria City women's championship started, they must be aware of it now.

It's shaping up as a battle between defending champion Dale Shaw and "the rest."

And, so far, Miss Shaw is having things her own way in a bid to put her name on the championship a fifth straight time.

The one-handicapper from Glen Meadows moved into today's semi-finals by scoring a 6-and-5 victory over 15-year-old Sydney Thomson of Colwood Wednesday at Cedar Hill.

Miss Shaw defeated clubmate Mildred Green 8 and 6 in the opening round and was to play Gorge Vale's Gert Pumfrey in today's semi-final.

Also advancing to the fours Wednesday were Colwood's Eileen Anderson and Diane Phillips of Uplands.

Mrs. Anderson chipped in a 40-foot wedge shot on a fourth extra hole and eliminated clubmate Corrine Floyd on the 22nd in the most exciting match of the day. Miss Phillips defeated Ruby Niemeyer of Glen Meadows 6 and 4.

Miss Thomson, who admitted to nervousness because "I'm not used to a great amount of people watching," trailed by three after nine holes as the defending champion went over par on only two holes.

Miss Shaw, who set a women's course record Monday with a one-under-par 65 at Cedar Hill, was approximately two over when the match ended.

Toronto Side Here This Weekend

Players in the Victoria and District Cricket Association only have two matches on their schedule this weekend — both exhibition tussles against Upper Canada College of Toronto.

Dave Auld will captain and select the first Victoria Side for the Sunday match at St. Michael's University School.

Both matches start at 1:30 p.m.

Poison Instead Of MDA

EDMONTON (CP) — Jack Richard Langier, 19, died May 10 from strychnine poisoning after taking two capsules of what he believed to be MDA, a cornoer's jury rules Wednesday.

The six-member jury had been investigating the death of the Edmonton youth who went into convulsive seizures shortly after he took the capsules in his home. He died after being rushed to Royal Alexandra hospital.

In his summation to the jury, provincial coroner Dr. Max Cantor said it was the first case he had seen "of strychnine masquerading under the name of MDA."

He said he called the inquest because he was concerned that some powder being circulated as MDA is, in fact, strychnine with a slight hallucinatory drug added to it.

"I'm not here to judge moral issues," Dr. Cantor said. "I'm only here to gain publicity so drug users will be more careful in what they buy and test it before they use it."

WINNIPEG (CP) — The scholarship program of the Canadian Nurses' Foundation is in jeopardy because nurses have failed to contribute, Marilyn . Riley, foundation vice-president said Wednesday.

Speaking at the annual meeting of the Canadian Nurses' Association (CNA), she said nurses have been "unwilling to support a national education scholarship program."

EDMONTON (CP) — A controversial textbook on sex, The Joy of Sex, is not obscene, district court Judge S. V. Legg ruled Wednesday about a month after a weeklong hearing in which the provincial government sought to have it ruled obscene.

In a 20-page decision, Judge Legg said the book is "a serious work on sex" and he ordered 50 copies of the book returned to Coles Book Stores Ltd., where they were seized earlier.

"The authors have dealt with the subject in an honest, straightforward and informative manner," the judge said after weighing evidence from expert witnesses.

EDMONTON (CP) — City council failed to come to a decision Wednesday on a comprehensive transportation plan, but voted down a motion by Ald. Una Evans to refer the plan back to the city administration.

Evans wanted the plan referred back to the administration so public hearings could be held. To approve the plan without first having public hearings would be "to once again impose an action on people without letting them have a say in it," she said.

Prepared by the transportation planning branch of the city engineering and transportation department, the plan suggests spending $25 million a year — including $10 million for rapid transit.

SASKATOON (CP) — The drudgery can be taken out of farming with the use of computer management aids and automatic controls, agricultural engineer H. B. Puckett said today.

Puckett said a farmer becomes more of a manager and less of a laborer with technological help.

PLENTY OF TIME

EDMONTON (CP) — Robert Wayne Deyoung, 30, won't have to pay the $75 fine levied against him on a charge of impersonating a doctor.

Deyoung will serve a 10-day sentence in default of paying the fine while he spends three months in jail on each of three charges of impaired driving.

Deyound, a psychiatric nurse, had been writing prescriptions for pills.

Indians to Claim Rights to Oil Sands

EDMONTON (CP) — The Indian Association of Alberta (IAA) will take legal action "within the year" to claim treaty rights to the Athabasca Oil Sands, about 160 miles north of Edmonton.

The president of the IAA, Harold Cardinal, said the legal action will demand Indians receive "an adequate share of the resources" through jobs, intensive training and cash payments to a provincial native development fund.

Cardinal said the oil sands, centre of a multi-billion dollar oil extraction industry which is expected to employ thousands of workers during the next decade, are covered by Treaty Number Eight, a treaty which a Northwest Territories Supreme Court justice has already ruled does not transfer control of land from Indians to the crown.

"This will probably be the most explosive, most delicate subject we will have on land claims," said Cardinal. "The oil sands are within Treaty Number Eight and the Morrow decision has already held that treaty to be only one of friendship or pieace, not a land surrender treaty."

Fight Halts Road

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The owner of a small service station in the path of a major highway redevelopment program has been served with an injunction ordering him not to interfere with highway crews.

The court order is the latest development in a two-year feud between the highways department and Andrew Norum, who operates a service station on the Yellowhead Highway, 150 miles east of here.

Although the highways department expropriated the 10-acre parcel of property required for the right-of-way in 1972, Norum has refused to move until a cash settlement is reached.

The cash settlement question has been sent to arbitration after the two sides failed to agree. The highways department has offered $10,552, but Norum is asking $32,634.

The dispute erupted last week when Norum ordered highway crews off the service station property when they tried to proceed with the upgrading, saying he would not allow the construction without a written settlement with the government.

Injunction Refused

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice David Verchere of British Columbia Supreme Court has adjourned an attempt by the Public Service Commission and the provincial government to obtain an injunction against 250 stationary engineers who picketed several government institutions Monday.

Mr. Justice Verchere ruled there was no need for the injunction because the engineers have promised there will be no further picketing. However, should the pickets reappear, the matter will be back in the courts, he said.

The engineers are trying to break away from the B.C. Government Employees' Union to form their own bargaining unit.

Girl's Body Found

KELOWNA (CP) — A group of children playing by the shore of Okanagan Lake Wednesday evening found the body of Rebecca Kitpou, 8, who had been missing from her home in Westbank, near here, since Saturday.

RCMP recovered her body from the lake near her home and later said foul play was not suspected. An inquest has been ordered but no date has been set.

The young Indian girl had left her home, Saturday with her dog for a walk. The dog returned alone later, sparking the search.

Spill Tops Estimate

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — An oil spill, 30 miles north of here, in May was 16 times larger than the company responsible for it originally estimated, an Environment Canada official said Wednesday.

Ian Robertson, assistant manager of the federal environmental emergency branch, said Westcoast Petroleum Ltd. has calculated it lost 4,717 barrels in the May 14 break which spilled oil into the Salmon and Fraser rivers and forced cleanup operations as far south as Hope.

The figure works out to about 164,000 gallons, more than 16 tyimes the 10,000 gallons which company officials estimated at the time of the break.

Bike Helmet Blamed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Chief Coroner Glen McDonald will recommend to the Motor Vehicle Branch that there be more stringent standards on the proper fit and sale of motorcycle helmets. He made the statement after an inquest Tuesday into the death of Gary Bird, 16, of Vancouver, killed June 2 when his motorcycle collided with a car. The inquest was told the youth's crash helmet was too large and probably obstructed his vision.

Byelections Set

ASHCROFT (CP) — A byelection will be held here in July, it was announced Wednesday, to fill the mayor's position last held by Oscar Johansen who resigned May 15 to protest the public officials and employees disclosure act. No date has been set.

A byelection will be held in Casche Creek July 5 to fill two aldermanic seats formerly held by Chuck Roberts and Larry Raeugh who resigned for the same reason.

How to Treat a Visitor Without Actual Robbery

The ink was scarcely dry on our little whimsy earlier this week concerning Gordon Sinclair's rhapsody to the Americans when our town's leading tourist promoter was fuming on the phone.

It was his view, you see, that the piece was "anti-American" — gosh, how did he ever get that idea? — and he thought it was high time that we stopped being beastly to the Yanks. This will be our biggest-ever tourist year, thanks to the Americans, said he, and we should do everything possible to make them feel at home.

If we see a U.S. licence plate, said he, we should approach and sing out a cheery word of greeting. If one is parked alongside an expired meter we should slip in the appropriate coin. We should clam-up on any rude questions about Watergate or impeachment or such. Tourists, said he, want to be wanted and we should actually have an organized effort to love the stranger in our midst.

A similar plan, I gather, was attempted last year in Chicago where the tourist groups inaugurated "Hello Week," calculated to break the customary ice between residents and non-residents. It seems to have been something short of a spectacular success and crept into history along with "Eat More Turnips Week" and the rest, though, of course, what was a failure in Chicago need not be a failure in Victoria even if it most likely will be.

Naturally, we want to discourage any overt rudeness to American visitors. I, myself, would apply the same rule that I do in my home, never to say a harsh word to a guest unless he asks for it. But that's about as far as I'm prepared to go to encourage tourist and I think it's far enough.

The deeply ingrained idea that the smiling stranger is out to rob you blind is now such a part of the big city attitude that it seems to preclude any possibility of the calculated hospitality recommended by my caller.

Indeed his interest is, in part, linked with the notion of graciously parting the tourist from a maximum hunk of his bankroll and it may just be that, on those terms, he won't want to be wanted at all. There is, you see, a difference between being wanted and being had.

I hate to segue again into that familiar city-versus-country bit, but it must be done to make the point that nothing will work with the tourist except sincerity.

No villager would dream of passing an unfamiliar face without at least a nod of recognition. On the country roads where I now spend most of my time it is the practice for drivers, though they may be total strangers, to lift a palm in greeting or even thumb a barp on the klaxon, a signal of good cheer which sends each on his way with his spirits lifted an inch or more.

Unhappily, it is not this way in the city and, indeed, strangers who pass each other feel compelled to hood their eyes so that there will be no invasion of the formidable fortress of privacy.

Even at close quarters — in crowded elevators, for example — everyone seems rigidly resolved to disprove the theory that no man is an island unto himself. Eyes front, hostile, aloof, distrustful, distant, they rise or plummet to their tiny destinies with the appearance of mortal enemies.

A man never realizes this so deeply as he does when he's in a friendless city and yearns for some human companionship or, at least, recognition that he exists. It is the only commodity not to be found in the yellow pages of the telephone directory that, chances are, he'll end up reading in his lonely hotel room.

It is a truism of travel that the greater the density of population the greater the prospect of being alone. I have myself, felt a kind of panic in places like New York's teeming Times Square in the knowledge that the only way I might establish contact would be with a piercing cry of "Help!"

There are many reasons for this, apart from the suspicion that a stranger who put a coin in your expired parking meter or said hello would surely be up to no good.

One reason is that the iron mask of shyness settles on people who are among foreigners, an attitude caused by the fear of being repulsed. A man hates to cast out the first smile when the odds are high, he knows, that it won't bounce back.

That works both ways. I just know that if I step up to a car with Oregon licence plates and sing out a cheery hello to the occupants the driver will, sure as shooting, inquire, "What are you selling, Bub?" and I wouldn't blame him if he did.

Better, say I, to just let the Americans enjoy our scenery, which is what they came for, and not embarrass them with hypocrisy.

Two-Way Salute By Ships

It was truly a ships of the line situation Wednesday when 14 ships of the Pacific Command went through their paces off Beacon Hill Park.

Seen in the sailpast that drew a large gallery are the six destroyer-escorts that formed part of the parade, HMCS Gatineau leads, followed by HMCS Terra Nova, HMCS Restigouche, HMCS St. Croix, HMCS Mackenzie and HMCS Saskatchewan.

The sailpast was a two-barrelled salute. It hearlded the beginning of Canada Week and bade a ceremonial farewell to the submarine HMCS Rainbow, going through her last manoeuvres with the fleet. She goes into mothballs Aug. 1.

ARSON PROBED IN HOUSE FIRE

The provincial fire marshal's office is investigating the possibility of arson in a fire that destroyed a new house at 273 Portsmouth in Colwood early this morning.

Colwood RCMP placed the loss at $30,000. A spokesman said the house, just completed, was empty.

Origin of the fire, which was reported at 4:30 a.m., has not yet been determined. Twenty-two firemen from the Colwood Volunteer Fire Department were at the scene for more than two hours.

Police said the inside of the home was gutted and the roof destroyed.

'Council Trying To Brush Me Under the Rug'

Victoria Indian carver Allan Poelzer said today city council is just trying to "shut me up and brush me under the rug like they've always done."

In the latest move, the finance committee referred his request for a licence back to city council next Thursday.

Poelzer wants to sell his carvings on the sidewalk outside Eaton's and has been trying for more than a month to get a trades licence.

"It looks like they might give us (he and his wife Gloria) a licence to sell in Centennial Square — but that's just Desolation Square," Poelzer said today.

"Who's going to go down there in January, February and March to buy a totem pole from us when we're starving?"

He charged Wednesday his application was rejected because of racial prejudice.

Council must unanimously reject Poelzer's request for a licence, city solicitor Jakob de Villiers told the committee today.

If the vote is not unanimous, he said, Poelzer can apply for his licence in the normal way and probably receive it.

Council last week rejected Poelzer's request by a 5-4 vote. Mayor Peter Pollen cast the deciding vote.

Pollen today called "entirely irresponsible" comments made by Poelzer Wednesday calling the mayor a "two-bit four-flusher of a used car salesman."

He said he found "most reprehensible" Poelzer's "acting like a damn fool and threatening great threats against an individual's business."

Poelzer had threatened to take over city hall and Pollen's car business next Tuesday, but said today he would take no action until he had final word from the council meeting Thursday.

Ald. Bill Tindall suggested a site on private property could be found for Poelzer instead.

"That would be the solution to this specific problem," he said.

All committee members agreed some procedure must be worked out for handling requests for on-street selling.

Two similar applications for trade licences were rejected by the committee this morning — one to sell snacks on the new promepade on the Inner Harbor and another to sell fresh fruit on streets and sidwalks.

Two more applications, both to sell paintings around the Inner Harbor, were tabled.

Saanich to Protest Crofton Pollutants

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

A retired chemical engineer living near Prospect Lake in Saanich says poisons in pollutants belched from the B.C. Forest Products pulp mill at Crofton are "an awful nuisance" on his property.

After hearing Joseph Rockey, 4721 Mountain Road, Saanich council's environment committee Wednesday recommended aldermen take the complaint to the provincial pollution control branch and the company.

Rockley, who has had 40 years experience, has also written to Health Minister Dennis Cocke.

Retired six months, Rockley spent the last 20 years practising his profession exclusively in the pulp and paper industry.

"The gases and vapors originating from the alkaline pulping mill are strong poisons and highly noxious, causing great discomfort," he told the committee.

Rockley stated that, although his home was 25 miles from the mill, "natural obstacles such as land promontories, the sea, the forests and mountains did not prevent the concentration of hydrogen sulphide and mercaptons — pollutants generated at pulp mills — being not only noticeable but being also an awful nuisance."

These were particularly troublesome, he said, when there was a near-northerly wind.

Rockley said Scandinavian equipment to deal with the problem had been available in Canada for some time.

"Some sectors of the industry resisted or assumed inert positions in combating air pollution for financial, rather than technical reasons."

When properly installed, anti-pollution equipment could result in savings to the mills by the recapture of chemicals that otherwise would be lost in the atmosphere, Rockley said.

He added he had received complaints, probably because they knew his profession and his knowledge of the situation, from people as far away as Gordon Head.

Rockley said it was common knowledge the pulp and paper industry is enjoying "unexpected windfall profits on account of world-wide shortages of pulp."

"There should be, therefore, substantial improvement to cash generation and flow in the position of any pulp mill, permitting for large and extraordinary capital expenditure to combat air pollution."

Navy Retrieves Drifting Tug

A 38-foot tug was towed safely into the Dockyard this morning by the destroyer-escort HMCS Mackenzie after two men abandoned her in the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

David Gray of Coquitlam and an unidentified companion thought their craft was in danger of sinking.

The 38-foot Vancouver-based Vanlene was found drifting about three miles south of Sheringham Point, where the men had left her.

A spokesman for the Sooke Motel said he was awakened at 1 a.m. by the two men, who had apparently used the tug's dory to make their way to shore. They had roused the occupants of a house and been driven to the motel.

"I was told the ship was foundering and the waves were quite heavy. The tug's engine had stalled."

He said Gray and his companion left the tug because she had a steel hull, which they thought would make her sink faster.

The Victoria Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt received a call at 3 a.m., reporting the tug was adrift in the strait.

The Mackenzie answered the general marine broadcast and took the tug under tow.

NEW TRY TO OUST UNION

Employees of the Mediaeval Inn have fired off another letter to the Labor Relations Board in their latest attempt to stop union representation.

The employees were certified under Local 835 of the Beverage Dispensers and Culinary Workers Union last year, but the staff has changed since then and present workers don't want union coverage, spokesman Ulla Spech said.

The employees petitioned the Labor Relations Board two weeks ago to allow them to hold a vote on whether they want the union, but have not received an answer.

The second letter was sent Tuesday.

Object of Uplands Hunt May Be a Non-Cougar

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

It could be called the case of the missing cougar.

Or a case of mistaken identity.

Either way, a cougar reported Tuesday in Oak Bay's Uplands Park has vanished.

A hunt was carried out on the strength of three sightings — two by a man and his wife residing in the 2800-block Beach Drive, and one by a student constable with Oak Bay police.

The provincial fish and wildlife predator hunter, Dan Lay, came from Nanaimo with tracking dogs but despite a thorough search of the 75-acre parkland, was unable to pick up any scent.

Oak Bay police, quoting wildlife officials, said that was not conclusive evidence of a mistaken identity as a cougar's scent would probably not hold because of the hot, dry weather.

Provincial biologist Dr. Jim Hatter said it would not be unusual for a cougar to stray into settled area but he was skeptical.

He said it was the time of year cougars are given to prowling, especially toms looking for females . . . not people.

He said the government has received reports of cougars in the past but they have invariably turned out to be large dogs or even raccoons.

There is no question, though, cougars can and do inhabit the Saanich peninsula. One was shot with a tranquilizer gun at the airport a month ago, and taken to a less populated spot in the Nanaimo area.

On Aug. 17, 1955, one was observed standing on a rock viewing traffic near the Quadra-Patricia Bay intersection.

But it was a female couger that strayed into the city on the morning of April 26, 1926, that really startled Victorians. It wandered up Yates and stopped on the steps of the Public Library at Yates and Blanshard for a rest when it was shot by a police constable.

No less strange was an incident on June 8, 1961. Taxi driver Maurice Kozak driving down Douglas just after 4 a.m., saw a cougar strolling the sidewalk.

Police cars chased the cougar. A rifle shot wounded the animal, and as it crouched in the doorway of what is now the B.C. Medical office on Government, it was killed.

Stolen Cheques Clearing Stores

Three of the 1,827 blank cheques stolen from four Victoria painting and decorating firms last weekend have turned up, cashed, netting thieves almost $1,000.

And Victoria fraud squad officers fear it could be just a start.

All three cheques were made out to Spartan Painters and Decorators, and were cashed Sunday, two at the Warehouse supermarket on Burnside for $425 and $305, and one at the Maverick Market on Esquimalt for $267.50. In each case a man was the passer.

The cheques, drawn on the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, Douglas and Cormorant were stolen from the offices of the firms at 2912 Quesnel. The three other firms involved are B.C. Gypsum and Dry Wall, B.C. Gypsum Campbell River Ltd., and Coulter and Associates Construction Ltd.

ABNORMAL DIVE

A coroner's jury ruled Wednesday that the diving death of lawyer Richard Clay Ellis June 2 was due to his "abnormal diving procedure."

Ellis died from an air embolism after a dive off Saxe Point.

Divers with Ellis at the time tried unsuccessfully to revive him after he surfaced.

Ellis, 48, was the president of the Canadian Rugby Union at the time of his death.

New People, Ideas for Bastion

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

A 12th season in which new people, new ideas and new techniques will prevail was outlined by president Hugh L. Henderson Wednesday at a Bastion Theatre press conference at the Empress Hotel.

Describing the performing arts in Canada as a vital Canadian industry, Henderson called Bastion "a major industry in this city."

He said the operating budget for next season will be $266,000 most of which is injected into the economic life of the community.

About one half of this amount must be generated as revenue, the balance coming from federal, provincial and corporate investment in the culture of the city.

Bastion has received a 130 per cent increase in its Canada Council grant this season — up to $70,000 from $30,000.

Other grants include $38,500 from the B.C. Cultural Fund and $14,000 from the Intermunicipal Committee.

But the income gap remains. Average costs per seat at the McPherson Playhouse, are $5.25, while potential revenues are $2.83 per subscriber or $3.50 for a single seat sale.

In pursuit of audiences Bastion is mounting a campaign to bring in 5,600 season ticket-holders. Last season there were 2,850.

The campaign target for funds is $130,000. Corporations and private sources will be approached by a team headed by Clare Copeland.

Already a $12,000 donation from Du-Maurier will sponsor the tour of three of the mainstage productions to up-Island centres and Rothmans will underwrite the theatre programs to $15,000.

Theatre as an economic investment will be stressed in the campaign rather than seeking the customary cultural handouts.

During its fourth professional year Bastion Theatre Company will employ more than 125 people, generate $120,000 in revenue and perform before an estimated minimum of 108,500 people.

Productions under consideration include Arsenic and Old Lace, Godspell, The Four Poster, an Eric Nicol play and either Alan Ayckbourn's comedy, Absurd Person Singular or Neil Simon's Sunshine Boys.

Artistic director Edwin Stephenson is in New Brunswick directing summer theatre and negotiating to bring noted Canadian actors John Colicos, Tom Kneebone, Dinah Christie, Frances Hyland and Leslie Yeo to Victoria.

The new season will also offer two more performances at convenient hours, a supper club, celebrity luncheons and probably a theatre bar.

Delectable Sauce Enhances Appetizers

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE

Two marvelous appetizers were among the tasty results of a four-hour cooking session we spent with two of Italy's leading chefs, Marco Nesi and Mariano Vizzotto of La Pace Hotel in Montecatini. One is toast topped with chicken-liver paste; the other is thinly sliced raw beef served with a delectable sauce. Both are outlined below.

Crostini Dello Chef

¼ cup olive oil
¼ cup finely chipped onion
¼ cup coarsely chopped celery
¼ cup coarsely chopped carrot
¼ pound round of beef, cut into half-inch cubes
¼ pound lean pork, cut into half-inch cubes
Salt and freshly ground pepper
¼ cup dry white wine
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
½ pound chicken livers, cut into half-inch cubes
3 tablespoons drained capers
3 flat anchovies, drained
2 teaspoons dry sherry
2 tablespoons butter, at room temperature
½ cup hot beef broth, approximately 28 slices French bread, each about half an inch thick (see note). Olive oil.

1. Heat the quarter cup of oil in a saucepan and add the onion, celery and carrot. Cook, stirring frequently about 10 minutes until the onion is golden brown.

2. Add the beef, pork, salt and pepper and continue cooking about 15 minutes, stirring frequently.

3. Sprinkle with white wine and nutmeg and cook until wine is reduced, about 10 minutes, stirring frequently.

4. Add the chicken livers and cook, stirring occasionally, 15 minutes.

5. Add the capers and anchovies and cook about 10 minutes longer. Stir and add the Cognac and sherry.

6. Remove the saucepan from the heat and add the butter. Stir over very low heat, gradually adding about one-quarter cup of broth. Add salt and pepper to taste. Spoon the mixture into the container of a blender or food processor and blend until smooth.

7. Preheat the oven to 400 degrees.

8. Arrange the slices of bread on a baking sheet and sprinkle or brush each slice with a little olive oil. Bake until crusty, 10 to 15 minutes.

9. Brush each slice with a little of the remaining beef broth and spread each slice with the paste.

YIELD: Eight to 12 servings.

NOTE: The number of slices depends on the size of the bread. The number indicated here is for a loaf about two and one half inches in daimeter. If a large loaf is used, use half the number and cut each slice in half.

Carpaccio

1¼ pounds raw lean beef, preferably top round
½ cup white vinegar
12 very small sour pickles, preferably imported French cornichons
½ cup finely chopped parsley
2 cloves garlic, finely minced
3 anchovy fillets
½ cup capers
3 tablespoons coarsely chopped onion
1-3 cup mustard, preferably imported mustard such as Dijon or Dusseldorf,, or use domestic creole or spicy mustard (do not use ballpark mustard)
¾ cup olive oil.

1. Trim the meat carefully to remove all outside fat. Have the meat sliced as thinly as possible. If a good, sturdy electric slicer is not available, the meat may be partially frozen to facilitate slicing with a very sharp knife.

2. Arrange the meat neatly in one layer on one large or two medium-size serving dishes.

3. Put the remaining ingredients into the container of an electric blender or a food processor. Blend without overblending. The sauce should have a slight texture. Serve the sauce with the meat on the side to be dipped into it or spoon the sauce over the meat.

YIELD: Six servings.

Sauce

1 egg yolk
1 teaspoon wine vinegar
3 tablespoons prepared mustard, preferably Dijon or Dusseldorf
A few drops of Tabasco sauce
Salt and freshly ground pepper
1 cup oil, preferably a light olive oil or a combination of olive oil and peanut, vegetable or corn oil
Lemon juice (optional)
¼ cup finely chopped fresh dill.

1. Place the yolk in a mixing bowl and add the vinegar, one tablespoon mustard, Tabasco, salt and pepper to taste. Beat vigorously for a second or two with a wire whisk or electric beater.

2. Start adding the oil gradually, beating continuously with the whisk or electric beater. Continue beating and adding oil until all of it is used. Taste the mayonnaise and add more salt to taste and the lemon juice if desired. Beat in the remaining mustard and the dill. If all the mayonnaise is not to be used immediately, beat in a tablespoon of water. This will help stabilize the mayonnaise.

YIELD: One and one-quarter cups.

Sweet and sour tang may win converts

For Jellied Salad Lovers A Cream Cheese Winner

By MARY MOORE

Social conveners and luncheon planners will grab this one. It is one of those jellied salads that should be made in advance much to the comfort of the cook. I promised on Tuesday when I gave you the Oxtail soup recipe.

It is new for Marianne, and I made it up as we went along. I am not a jellied salad enthusiast but I know I am in the minority at this time of year.

So today's effort is for ardent jellied salad makers. It is pretty, too, and it's sweet and sour tang will please many.

CREAM CHEESE SALAD MOULD

1 pkg. lime jelly powder
1½ cups boiling water
½ cup mayonnaise
4 oz. pkg. white cream cheese cubed
½ cup drained canned pineapple cubes
¼ cup mixed peel or fruit cake fruit or maraschino cherries sliced or glace
½ cup finely sliced celery
1 cored, unpared red apple, finely chopped

Dissolve the jelly powder thoroughly in the boiling water. Add the mayonnaise and cubed cream cheese and beat with rotary beater to thoroughly blend. Cool and chill until partially set. Add drained pineapple. (Note: Do not be tempted to use cubed raw pineapple when they are in season for they contain an enzyme which prevents gelatine from setting. It must be canned or cooked.) Also add peel or fruit cake fruit or cherries, celery and apple and mix gently. Pour into a fancy mould of 4-cup capacity is recommended. Chill until set.

To unmould loosen sides with sharp-pointed knife. Lower mould into hot water for 5 seconds. Cover with fancy serving plate and turn over and out. Garnish liberally with delicate lettuce or endive leaves and crescents of unpeeled red apple dipped in lemon juice and a border of quartered maraschino cherries.

TIMES COOKING columnist Mary Moore is one of 12 of Canada's best known food writers represented in the brochure My Favorite Recipe for British Columbia Canned Salmon produced by the Canned Salmon Association of B.C. Moore's recipe for Salmon Coquilles is included in the booklet, available free of charge by writing the association at P.O. Box 33798, Postal Station D, Vancouver, B.C. V6J 4L6. Other contributors included in the publication are cookbook author Madame Jehane Benoit, Margo Oliver of Weekend Magazine, Judy Ruddell of the Vancouver Sun and Muriel Wilson who contributes to assorted Vancouver Island newspapers.

WONDERBRA

BECAUSE YOU DON'T HAVE SEAMS AND NEITHER SHOULD YOUR BRA.

Once upon a time, bras had to have seams. That was the only way you could make them. But not any more. Because Wonderbra has a whole new way to make bras—with smooth, seamfree moulded cups. So you get all the shape and support you could want, without bumpy, bulging seams. Which makes Wonderbra a great shape to be in. And that's a fact.

CANNING CAUTION

The Consumers Association of Canada has issued reminders on the freezing and canning of meat and summer fruits and vegetables.

The CAC warns home canners to use only jars and lids manufactured specifically for that purpose. Test the seal of porcelain-lined caps by turning each jar partly in your hands. A similar test can be done on the seal of flat metal lids by pressing centre of lid down. If lid is firmly down and will not move, the jar is sealed. A clear ringing sound when tapped with a spoon means a good seal.

To maintain top quality in a freezer, meat must be wrapped carefully, reminds the CAC. Wrapping on fresh meat will protect it against over-handling but is not suitable for long-term freezing in cold, dry air. Before placing meat in the freezer, unwrap, then rewrap in aluminum foil or durable, seamless plastic freezer bags. Press out air and seal tightly with freezer tape. Air left in a package will cause oxidative changes resulting in off-flavours.

Food Additives Claimed Link To Hyperactivity

By THOMAS GRUBISICH

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Boston psychologist has been awarded a $50,000 federal grant to test a controversial claim that artificial flavors and colors can cause hyperactivity.

Dr. Keith Conners, director of the Human Resource Institute of Boston and an associate professor of psychology at Harvard University, said "we should have results in six months."

If the study validates the claims of Dr. Ben Feingold that artificial additives can trigger the symptoms of hyperactivity, it would, Conners said, "have revolutionary effects on the food industry and the drug industry."

The food industry would be hard hit because many foods contain artificial additives. The drug industry would feel an impact because drugs are often prescribed for hyperactivity an increasingly diagnosed behavioral disorder affecting young children.

Artificial additives are a proportionately small but major ingredient in most foods commonly eaten by children — cereals, various snacks and desserts, and beverages. The additives are used extensively by the food industry because they have reduced reliance on natural foods, like some fruits, that are expensive and not widely available.

After Feingold's claims were published last year, they were attacked by the Grocery Manufacturers of America, Inc., which represents big food companies. The GMA critique said flatly: "We know of no data which relate behavioral disturbances directly to the ingestion of food additives." It said Feingold's study was unscientific and subjective.

Though the GMA has not, so far, made any comment on the design of the Conners study, its criteria for any new investigation call for more elaborate controls.

The GMA criteria call for four diet groups to be studied — one with no synthetic colors and flavors, a second with another dietary modification, a third with no modification but clinical monitoring and a fourth with no modification but given a placebo drug.

Diet Action 'Lip Service'

WINNIPEG (CP) — Marguerite Schumacher, president of the Canadian Nurses Association, said society gives only lip service to the maintenance and promotion of health through nutrition study and other means.

Schumacher told the association's biennial meeting that only 11 per cent of working nurses and five per cent of the national health budget are devoted to illness prevention and maintenance in any form.

"The development of nursing within a health maintenance model or a growth and learning model would revolutionize the profession."

She said the association has been given approval to conduct a study on the proliferation of workers in the health field and what they are doing — or not doing.

Good Eating Proposed But No One Will Bite

By LON WOOD
Times Staff

One year ago Gwen Mallard was appointed by members of Citizens Association to Save the Environment to head a 12-person committee to find a way to get proper nutrition information and instruction to low-income families in outlying areas.

"The first phase of our plan would be to teach a task force of 15 people a concentrated course on the preparation of high-quality foods needed in a balanced diet," she said in a Times interview. "Then we'd have caravans go to far-flung reaches so that people could see these foods being prepared, taste them and hear what nutritional value they have."

MALLARD
. . . no response

But no one will bite.

CASE approached Education Minister Eileen Dailly for a $3,200 grant to hire three students to research the idea throughout the province. The request was passed to the Department of Health and turned down on the advice of provincial nutritional consultant Pat Wolczuk, said Mallard.

On Auguest 12 a more comprehensive submission of the proposal was made to Health Minister Dennis Cocke, with an attached note asking for a meeting to discuss the idea.

"We got a four line answer from Cocke saying he'd come out and 'see our operation' — but no comment on the proposal," she said.

On Dec. 17 four CASE members visited Wolczuk to discuss the plan.

"She let us know that nutrition was not a priority with the government and that there were no plans for community involvement — also no funds."

Wolczk, she said, suggested CASE take the plan to Human Resources for funding. There, they were told there was no money and that it was in the realm of the Department of Health.

Next to Consumer Affairs, where the minister, Phyllis Young, was "very responsive." "She said she would pass it along to her deputy minister for his evaluation — but no word has ever been received," said Mallard.

Mallard said CASE has now applied to the Community Resource Society of the Saanich Peninsula for a grant to support for a scaled-down version of the proposal as a pilot project.

"If it comes about it could be extended over the whole province — provided we can get proper evaluation by the government," she said.

Mallard, who teaches a night course in cooking, said she has welfare workers, teachers and a former World Health Organizatioin member ready to participate in the concept.

Both the detailed and abbreviated proposals include an extensive introduction, program outline, program detail and a full breakdown of estimated costs.

In the U.S., says Mallard, the department of agriculture operates an extension service for getting the nutrition message across to those who need it most — wives and mothers in low-income families.

"Since the program started five years ago, 840,000 homemakers have had intensive instruction on a one-to-one basis — which is really expensive," she said.

A youth program was started in 1970, she said, and in Oregon one program gave youngsters a judo lesson after each nutrition class.

Nutrition for Poor 'May Never Happen'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The retiring chairman of General Foods Corp., one of the world's largest food conglomerates, said today it may never be possible to provide proper nutrition for North America's poorest people.

Furthermore, said C.W. Cook, the United States may be placed in the position of deciding who will starve and who will eat in the world.

Cook filed a minority report to a statement on nutrition and the international food situation released at the opening of hearings by the Senate Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs. He is retiring June 30 from active management of General Foods.

"Proper nutrition for the lowest 20-25 per cent — my estimate — in the U.S. income scale has become virtually impossible as a consequence of food price trends over the past two years," he said.

"If the consumer has to compete with export demands of an increasingly crowded and hungry world, providing adequate nutrition to millions of lower-income Americans could become an impossible dream."

Cook said his views "are not widely supported nor are they popular."

He warned that Americans are unlikely to support major international food programs when their own grocery budgets are sharply strained.

He said world food needs will soon outpace world supplies and that it is possible, even probable, that the time will come when U.S. allocation of its food resources will determine who faces starvation in the world.

The majority report of the 11-member panel, headed by Gale Johnson of the University of Chicago and former commerce secretary Peter Peterson, couched its warnings of international food problems in much softer language.

The report of a separate 26-member panel on nutrition and special groups, also released, charged that the nation's hungry have become hungrier and poorer in the last five years despite strides forward in government attempts to end hunger in the United States. Inflation has gained even faster, said the panel.

SIMPLE SALAD EASY WITH YOGURT

By HILDA BEASTALL

Salads come naturally to summer months when even the smallest garden or balcony planter will provide crisp fresh lettuce, tiny radishes and green onions.

These ingredients need only the addition of yogurt to make them into a simple salad.

For a more complete salad for lunchtime:

4 cup broken leaf lettuce
½ cup sliced green onions
1 cup grated young carrot
¾ cup finely chopped parsley
½ cup coarsely ground raw peanuts
1 Tbsp vegetable oil
¾ cup yogurt or
2 Tbsp lemon juice and pulp
½ cup grated Cheddar cheese

About 1 hour before serving, dry the lettuce leaves, onions and parsley on a clean dish towel. Pull the lettuce into small pieces, slice onions and finely chop the parsley. Coat at once (in a china or glass bowl) with the oil, tossing with wood spoon and fork so that all pieces are protected from the air.

Add the grated carrot and some of the yogurt or lemon juice at once to prevent discoloration and loss of vitamins. Add coarsely ground peanuts. For young children or others without full complement of teeth, grind these more finely.

Add remaining yogurt or lemon juice. Cover with a plate and put into a cool cupboard to blend flavors for 30 minutes.

Have ready the ½ cup grated cheese to sprinkle over the salad either on individual plates or in the serving bowl. Serves four.

This salad has everything for appetizing flavor, appearance and nutrition. Serve with warm wholewheat buns. Let these be homemade if possible and reheated if necessary.

Choose the oil according to your own preference. You may find soy oil is the lightest and most bland; it blends well for dressings with both yogurt and fresh lemon juice.

In this salad, no additional salt, or skgar, is needed, for the vegetables have plenty of their own, sealed in by the oil coating. The quick coating of salad ingredients after cutting them is an important step in salad preparation.

Ideally, salads are composed of fairly large portions of vegetables with a dressing added to suit individual tastes. Sometimes we must prepare salads by fine cutting. This is when each ingredient must be coated as it is prepared.

This summer, make another bid at getting more members of the family, children and adults, into the good habit of salad enjoyment.

Always add some favorite food to the salad, choosing something different each day until you accumulate a usable collection of salad recipes to see you through the whole year, not only the summer months.

Days of Wine and Wienies

Giving a party is a lot like having a baby. No matter whose idea the conception was, in the final stages the woman is the one who does all the work.

A dinner party, in particular, is fraught with decisions.

While I am always tempted to duplicate the Hawaiian Luau featured in the latest women's magazine, I am terrified of indulging in culinary experimentation on such a grandiose scale. I mean, cocoanut chicken kabobs and divi-divi shrimp balls might be divine, but then again they might not. And I hate to iron all those linen napkins only to have eight people use them to hide their cocoanut chicken kabobs and divi-divi shrimp balls.

The only alternative is to serve a reliable, basic dish that I know will turn out reasonably well. But I'm not at all certain that my guests might not find it a bit dismal to have gotten haircuts and shaved their legs just for wieners and beans.

Of course, the food isn't the only problem; whatever I serve must be accompanied by wine. My knowledge of wine being only slightly less than my knowledge of East Indian weather patterns, I requested assistance of the clerk in the liquor store.

"What type of cuisine is madame serving?"

"Wienies."

"Wienies?"

"Look, lobster and steak are only enhanced by wine. Wienies NEED it. They're all-beef wienies, if that's any help."

Barely repressing a shudder, he handed me a bottle of Chateau Dracula 1973 which he [illegible] assured me was a Best Buy.

I had hoped for an amusing wine. Chateau Dracula exceeded my expectations; it was downright laughable.

Actually, my guests were impressed.

As one man put it, "Believe me, you couldn't have found a wine that goes more perfectly with wienies and beans."

When Daddy Streaks Close Your Eyelids

DEAR ABBY: You hear so much talk about how terrible the young people are, but how about the adults?

This new streaking fad is being encouraged by people who are old enough to know better. You can't pick up a newspaper without reading about a streaker. And everyone thinks it's something to laugh about.

Well, last week my 43-year-old husband went to take his usual shower before dinner, when al lof a sudden we heard the shower door bang, and in nothing flat here comes my husband running completely naked past me, our teen-aged daughter and two teen-aged sons! He ran through the living room, dining room, kitchen and back to the bedroom. He thought he was being funny. I was furious, and the children were too shocked to say anything.

What do you think about this streaking business? —Disgusted.

DEAR DISGUSTED: I think that there is so much to cry about today, that streaking is part of the "anything-for-a-laugh" syndrome. For my part, if something I didn't want to see more of came into view, I'd quickly close my eyes.

DEAR ABBY: I am doing time in a federal penitentiary, and have noticed that you seem to have a sympathetic feeling toward prisoners.

I won't go into my history because it would take up your whole column, but I do have a favor to askk of you. I want to study the Bible, but I don't have one. Could you please send me one? I am a Christian. I am not begging. I can pay for it a little at a time. I am black and male, if that matters. —Four Years To Go.

DEAR FOUR: Your color doesn't matter, but your sex does because I have a friend in Dallas, Tex, who will send a red Bible to any man in prison who wants one, and a white Bible to every female inmate. It comes with instructions on how to study, and it's free. His name is Chaplain Ray. Send me your complete address and I'll do the rest. God bless.

DEAR ABBY: This is to thank you for publishing that hilarious column in which you included all those formal divorce announcements. I laughed until my sides ached.

When our daughter was divorced two years ago, my husband and I went through all the agonies other parents endure when their married children divorce. (Isn't there some way we can keep them together? The whole town is talking. What will we tell people?"

Now we realize it wasn't all that tragic. Our daughter is soon to marry another man, and this one is a prince.

I just had to tell you that I got a wonderful laugh out of that column. I'm only sorry we didn't know such announcements were available two years ago. We'd have sent some. —Reader.

DEAR READER: Thanks, I needed that. Not everyone saw the humor in that column, and to those who did not, I apologize. Read on:

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Friday, June 21

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Go straight ahead, despite dubious friends or associates. Key is to maintain sense of humor, to be flexible,, to enlarge emotional horizons, to perceive potential. Home, family, special agreements are very much in picture.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Light touch accomplishes wonders. Use charm to unravel red tape. Deal with Scorpio, Aquarius, Leo individuals. Accent is on short trip, visit, message which imparts needed information. One you admire shows concern for your welfare.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't count on immediate dividends. Key now is to plan properly, to organize priorities, to invest in future. Accent is on budget, income, where the money goes and how it gets that way. Another Gemini could figure prominently. Don't count out Virgo, either!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Cycle is high; practical affairs dominate, especially within family circle. Taurus, Libra individuals are likely to be involved. Take initiative in diplomatic way. Means set pace without appearing arrogant.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): look behind the scenes. Don't be frightened of phantoms. Avoid self-deception. Shake off foolsih doubts. Problems are in your head, figments of your sensitivity. Know it and stand proud, tall. You get help where you require it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't mix friends and money. Accept added responsibility. Deal with Cancer, Capricorn persons. One who performs special services should be told what is good and otherwise. Be fair — and firm. Not always easy but will bring desired results.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Unusual turn of events will work in your favor. Know it and be confident. Finish what you start. Be gracious to one who unburdens problem. Strive to climb ladder. Refuse to be satisfied with status quo position.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Bring forth creative abilities. Imprint your own style. Deal with members of opposite sex. Personal magnetism flows. Many are drawn to you; you could win popularity contest. Leo, Aquarius figure prominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec.21): Trust hunch and follow through on it. Share knowledge. Learn by teaching. You get financial advantage. Build for security. Take nothing for granted. Double check. Aquarian plays significant role.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): One in authority is willing to loosen purse strings — for your benefit. Element of timing favors your efforts. Accept social invitation. Contacts now could develop into meaningful relationships. Know it; proceed accordingly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Pace slows but you get firmer foothold. Check work schedule. Keep health resolutions. Enlarge horizons. Catch up on mail and calls — initiate correspondence. Sagittarian can aid. Co-operate with one who shares your interests.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Emotions dominate. Your ESP works overtime. You sense what you need to know. Member of opposite sex plays important role. Give and receive — balance relationship. Avoid one-sided arrangement. Change now is beneficial.

Diversified menus greatly increase the pleasure of eating! If you think your cooking rejertoire needs expanding there is an excellent 64-page recipe booklet to help you.

The "New Metropolitan Cook Book" differs from the majority of other cook books, because it concentrates on nutritionally sound dishes with a moderately reduced fat content.

Listed are the types of foods that should be included in each meal. There is also a menu plan for a full week which clearly shows you what a blanced food pattenr is like.

For most Canadians, dinner is the most substantial meal of the day. The main course should be a protein-rich entree such as meat or fish. The booklet says that a satisfying portion need not weigh more than four to six ounces, even for an active male. It also suggests that because of its nutritional value, bread also has its place at dinner, even for those on a diet.

No cookbook would be complete without a section on deserts. This booklet features of the low calorie type.

Bite Put On Bites

EDMONTON (CP) — There was time when Dave Mynard induldged himself with cakes and pastries and as a food preparation instructor at a city school there was plenty of opportunities. But all that has changed now.

Last February he had an orthodontic brace positioned in his mouth to prevent him from overeating and his weight has dropped from 260 to 200 pounds in four months.

"The diet is good for anyone with chronic weight problems," he said.

Tomatoes and Peppers: What a Combination!

Tomato fruits the size of gooseberries are to be seen on outdoor plants that were well advanced before being planted. Cool nights in some locations have held back others which were hurried out too soon.

However, tomatoes are so worth growing to have them fully ripened on the plants that any kind of assistance the gardener can provide will pay off in vitamin richness.

The same statement should be applied to sweet peppers.

In a pamphlet titled Nutrient Value of Some Common Foods (Department of National Health and Welfare), we find that a fresh tomato weighing 3½ ounces is rated as having a vitamin A content of 1080 I.U., and 199 mg. vitamin C.

Since the publication, and probably the analysis, comes from eastern Canada, it is likely that these figures are based on field ripened fruits, but the chart does not say so.

Sweet peppers in the same chart are rated at 370 I.U. of vitamin A and 71 mg. of vitamin C. for a 2½ ounce fresh green pepper.

Imagine the pick-up food value of one tomato and one green pepper picked fresh and eaten raw!

When the green peppers turn red, they are even more delicious than when green — they gain a sweetness lacking in the green stage. No nutrient value is listed for the red sweet pepper, which leaves us with a gap though we enjoy the fruit just the same.

If you have backward sweet pepper or tomato plants in the garden, try putting a six or eight inch wide piece of wood about a foot high into the ground to the north of each plant. Be careful not to injure roots.

The reflected and trapped warmth may be enough to speed up flowering and fruit production in spite of the slow start this spring. Opened and flattened tall juice cans can be similarly used. Not only the stems and leaves will be warmer but the soil temperature will be a degree or two higher with radiated heat.

Better still would have been the use of a portable coldframe, frequently mentioned and described in this column.

Wood sides, and a moveable glass top sloping to the south, provide ideal conditions in late spring and early summer when temperatures are variable. Those are the growth weeks, and having the plants in soil prevented from becoming too chilly, pepper and tomato plants are brought along to flowering and fruiting more quickly.

Thereafter, the glass cover is only put on if the night is forecast to go below, say, 50 degs. F.

At the end of the season, around September 1, the cover comes into use again by day to trap warmth from the sun to finish growing and ripening whatever fruits remain on the plants.

What a combination! Ripe tomatoes and ripe sweet peppers — all in the same garden, and in the same salad.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

When today's deal arose in a rubber-bridge game, our South declarer committed a mechanical error which brought about his downfall. Can you isolate his error?

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

SOUTH

◊ 5 3
♣ A K Q 8

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	1 ♡	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ◊.

When West's queen of diamonds was allowed to capture the first trick, West led another diamond, dummy's king winning. The three of clubs was then led to South's ace, West's jack falling. Next came the eight of spades, and when West followed with the three-spot, dummy's five was played. East won the trick with the jack, and continued the attack on the diamond suit, the board's ace taking the trick.

The four of clubs was now led to South's king, West discarding a heart. The ten of spades came next, West perforce covered with the queen; and dummy cashed three spade tricks. Now came the nine of clubs — and declarer was "stuck." If he played the eight of clubs, the nine would win, but then he couldn't get back to the South hand to cash the club queen. And if he overtook the nine with the queen, East's ten of clubs would become the highest-ranking club left in the deck.

And so declarer ended up making three spade tricks, two diamonds, and three clubs, to incur a one-trick set.

Declarer's error came early in the play, when he led the four of clubs to the second club lead. With West's jack having fallen on the initial club lead, declarer should have recognized that the jack might well have been a singleton.

To the second club lead, declarer should have led the board's nine of clubs to his king. West would discard a heart. After dummy's three spades had been cashed, declarer would then play the four of clubs, East following suit with a low club. It would now be a routine matter for declarer to win the trick with his own eight of clubs, finessing against East's marked ten-spot.

Thus, by "unblocking" with dummy's club nine on the second club lead, declarer would have paved the way for the making of four club tricks and his contract.

Star Of Ascot

See-through lace net dress was worn Wednesday by Linda Lovelace the star of the underground sex movie Deep Throat. She stole the show at the Ascot races two days running with her revealing choice of dresses. At right is her boyfriend, producer David Winters.

Boaring Times

AUSTIN, Tex — Paul Marshall and John C. Ranne lived in Dallas and owned adjoining hog farms in Van Zandt County. They were good friends and neighbors until the day the hog went bad.

Ranne's hog had shown signs of being an ornery animal before that fateful day. Marshall had been out in front of his house at least a dozen times when the hog would lower his head, snort a couple of times and charge wildly sending Marshall scrambling for safety in the nearest possible place — his outhouse.

On Jan. 21, 1970, Marshall could take it no longer. He left Ranne the following note:

"John, your boar has gone bad. He is trying to chase me off the farm. He stalks us just like a cat stalks a mouse every time he catches us out of the house. We are going to have to get him out before he hurts someone."

On the say day, Marshall was walking from his house to his pickup truck and the pig attacked, biting Marshall severely on the hand.

He sued Ranne and was awarded $4,146.

ACTRESS Vanessa Redgrave has lost a bid to gain one of 58 seats on the Actors' Union's ruling council in British voting. Earlier this year she lost a U.K. parliamentary election race on her Trotskyist Workers' Revolutionary Party ticket.

He's a Prison Doctor

NEW YORK — A New Jersey physician who shot a man to death was sentenced Wednesday to two years as prison doctor on a 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. shift.

State Supreme Court Justice William Kapelman imposed the unusual sentence on Dr. Morris Halper, 50, who could have gotten a maximun seven years in state prison.

Halper pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the May 3, 1972, slaying of Thomas Franco, 24, outside the doctor's office.

The physician said Franco struck him during a quarrel over a parking place.

The sentence specified that Halper work as a doctor at the Rikers Island city prison from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., five days a week during the first year of his sentence, and two days a week the second year.

New Manager Of Bay Here

Robert Chorley of Vancouver has been appointed the new manager of The Bay department store in Victoria, it was announced Tuesday.

He succeeds Allan Brent, who said he was moving to Montreal to be the company's manager for men's wear in the general merchandising office.

SPOKANE — Jinnie Cox, [illegible], Wednesday began her quest for a world's record for crow's nest sitting. She also hoped to shed 30 pounds from her 175-pound frame by dieting during the sit-in. She hopes to remain in the four-foot tub atop a 40-foot metal mast for at least 30 days.

STOCKTON, Calif. — A 52-year-old transient got a rude awakening Wednesday after he bedded down in a trash bin to escape the rain. The sleeping tramp, Joe Rogers, got dumped along with the garbage into a scavenger truck.

TOKYO — Japanese democracy might be working better today if Emperor Hirohito had abdicated or been executed after the Second World War, says one of Japan's best-known political and literary figures.

Writing in the magazine JIYU, Shintaro Ishihara deplores what he calls the rootlessness of Japanese society and asserts that one reason for it is the failure to establish the emperor's responsibility for the war.

BLACKSTOCK, Ont. — Litter lifting can be profitable.

John Bonsma, 20, and some friends spent two hours scavenging nearby Mosport Park following the departure of the estimated 100,000 fans who attended Sunday's Can-Am auto races.

Bonsma collected more than 4,300 empty beer bottles for almost $90.

He also found enough unopened bottles of beer to fill seven 24-bottle cases.

BARTLETT, Ill. — Illinois state police today sought the owner of a navy seabag but felt certain he or she would not come forward to claim it. The bag was found along a road. It contained about $65,000 worth of processed marijuana, police said.

NEW ORLEANS — Habeba the belly dancer wants to perform her exotic gyrations in the White House when President Sadat of Egypt visits the United States. Habeba, who says she has taught 2,500 women and men to belly dance in her "Middle Eastern Belly Dance Studios," has performed with the New Orleans Philharmonic Symphony.

TRENTON, N.J. — High school principal Dominic Parisi was docked two weeks pay for clipping a girl's hair.

Parisi, principal at Battin High in Elizabeth, N.J., was charged with conduct unbecoming a professional in a ruling issued by the New Jersey education department in Trenton.

The department said Parisi admitted making snipping motions above the girl's head with a pair of scissors but said the cutting was accidental.

LITERACY STUDY

The provincial education department soon will conduct a province-wide study on literacy levels in schools.

Education Minister Eileen Dailly told the legislature Wednesday she will announce an over-all provincial evaluation procedure on the actual standards of reading in the province.

She made the announcement in response to a question by Conservative leader Scott Wallace, who asked if the department would be involved in the literacy study planned by Vancouver school board.

They're Still Debating

Opposition members moved Wednesday to hoist a government motion which would limit debate in the legislature.

Victoria Socred MLA Newell Morrison proposed an amendment which would have the report of a special legislative committee to back for further consideration.

The report, which did not receive unanimous consent of the all-party committee in the first place, recommends specified time limits on debate in the house.

Opposition members generally agree to limits on some debate in the house but they strenuously object to 135-hour limit on discussion of all departmental estimates.

The motion has been discussed on four different occasions and each time opposition members have called the limits "closure."

Morrison said it is now obvious the move does not have support from all sides of the house and he urged continued debate on the issue back in committee stage.

Jim Chabot (SC-Columbia River) said new information has come to light since the committee made its report.

He said the government based its arguments in support of the changes on the fact that other jurisdictions have similar limits. But MLAs told the house this week that other jurisdictions limit debate in the house but allow free debate of all estimates in out-of-house committees.

Scrutiny of the estimates in committee provides an escape valve, said Chabot, and B.C. should reconsider its position.

Hartley Dent (NDP-Skeena), who acts as deputy speaker and thus chairman in house committee, said the time limits recommended are "reasonable and generous."

Liberal leader David Anderson adjourned debate of the amendment to the motion and debate will continue this week.

Funding Sought

A small amendment to the Audit Act which would allow the cabinet to authorize spending warrants while the legislature is adjourned was introduced Wednesday by Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall.

Cabinet has the power to do so but only if the legislature has been officially prorogued, meaning a definite end to a session.

Hall said the government may only adjourn the present marathon session to October or November, and would require emergency spending powers in the interim.

Prorogation means that before a new session can be called, there must be a formal speech from the throne and ensuing debate, which takes up some days.

'Political Invasion Of Academia in B.C.'

Would the NDP have objected if Social Credit founder Major James Douglas had been appointed to head a government research institute during the Socred era?

This question was posed to the government Wednesday during third reading debate of the Economic Policy Analysis Institute of B.C. Act.

Liberal Pat McGeer (Vancouver-Point Grey) said the government assumes it knows who are economic experts.

"Major Douglas was a world-renowned economist," said McGeer, but if he had been appointed to direct a government research institute the NDP "would have made a major outcry."

McGeer argued the government's plans to set up a research institute at the University of Victoria headed by American economist Mason Gaffrey, is "blatant political interference in the life of academia."

He and Resources Minister Bob Williams argued across the floor of the house and McGeer forced a vote on two sections of the bill.

Both votes split 32-to-15 with all three opposition parties siding with McGeer to oppose the sections, but the bill eventually won final reading.

"This is the first major political invasion of academia in B.C.," said McGeer. "It's an unhealthy bill."

He asked Williams what would happen if the director of the institute appoints one of William's friends to the new body.

Williams said the five-man board of directors of the institute will be a separate, autonomous body.

He criticized McGeer for having "an exclusive, elitist view of the world."

The cabinet-appointed board will be composed of representatives of labor, consumer groups, producers, professionals and government interests.

Williams said McGeer should not talk about the purity of universities since academic institutes accept "seed money" from the corporate world to ensure the "right kind of approach" is taken by the academics.

The bill, which formalizes the beginnings of a research institute already operating at UVic, sets up a $5 million est payments to run the fund which will provide intercentre.

Lauk Hits Harbors

A call for a new body to manage West Coast harbors with power shared equally by federal, provincial and municipal governments was made Wednesday by Industrial development Minister Gary Lauk.

In a letter to federal Transport Minister Jean Marchand, Lauk said the existing Ottawa-controlled National Harbors Board is not responsive, has not planned for orderly port development and "appears to act in total isolation."

He said that port operations under the NHB "have somehow escaped the control of the government in Ottawa and have come to be operated as the private reserve of individuals appointed to the board."

Lawyer to Head WCB Review Panels

Wallace I. Auerbach, a Vancouver lawyer, will become chairman of the Workmen's Compensation Board review boards July 1.

The boards are panels set up to review individual WCB decisions.

ACT TO GOVERN REDUCING SALONS

The consumer services department hopes to use the new Trade Practices Act to protect citizens against unfair practices of reducing salons.

If this doesn't work, the department will seek new legislation calling for compulsory bonding of salons, Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young said Wednesday during question period in the legislature.

She also told MLAs there is a "valid distinction" between health spas and figure salons.

She said spas only provide services and facilities while figure salons promise weight and size reductions.

Health spas, she said, are understandably distressed at being lumped together with the salons which have come under a great deal of criticism.

Seven salons closed in Vancouver last week and Young said none of them were bonded.

Mines Don't Like Royalty Levels

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia mining companies Wednesday reacted unfavorably to the royalty base prices announced by Mines Minister Leo Nimsick.

The base price is 58 cents a pound for copper, $82.50 an ounce for gold, $3 an ounce for silver and three basic values for molybdenum: $1.60 a pound for concentrates; $1.85 for oxide and $2.21 for ferroemolybdenum.

The base prices are important in that they determine the amount of revenue the provincial government will receive from its royalty under Bill 31 — the Mining Royalty Act.

Under Bill 31 the government will start collecting the super royalty, which amounts to 50 per cent, whenever the selling price of the four minerals exceeds by 20 per cent the government fixed base price.

Norman B. Keevil Jr. executive vice-president of Teck Corporation Ltd., said that he does not agree with the concept of a super royalty.

"At whatever level the super-royalty is still going to create real hardship for those mines that have not yet recovered their capital costs," he said. "Granduc Mines Ltd. and consolidated Churchill Copper Corporation Ltd. are good examples."

"I think it is fair to suggest that there are no profits at all as far as these companies are concerned, therefore, no super profits, until a mine has repaid its capital costs. It would be reasonable that the super royalty would not apply until then."

Keith Steeves, vice-president in charge of finance for Bethlehem Copper Corp. Ltd., said his company's production costs in the first quarter of this year amounted to 53 cents for each pound of copper produced and 20 per cent of the base price for copper of 58 cents amounts to about 69.5 cents.

With these figures Bethlehem would show a profit of 16.5 cents for each pound, which would amount to an effective taxation rate of 70 per cent, he said, if the federal government does not allow royalties to be used as a tax deductible item.

Thomas Elliott, manager of the British Columbia and Yukon Chamber of Mines, said that Bill 31 will probably discourage mining investments in the province.

"The simple point is that the basic royalty, plus the super royalty, in addition to the many forms of provincial and federal taxation, preclude the repayment of the large sums of capital investment required to bring into production the large low-grade porphyry copper deposits typical of British Columbia," he said.

Vote Spending Law Soon—Barrett

British Columbia will have an election spending law before the next provincial election, Premier Dave Barrett promised Wednesday.

He made the announcement during an exchange with Pat McGeer (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) over objections by the Liberal MLA to government funding of the new economic policy analysis institute at the University of Victoria.

McGeer, a University of B.C. faculty member himself, said industry and academia should stand on their own feet and politics should remain independent of both. The premier then asked if Liberals would refuse to accept election campaign donations from industry.

The New Democratic Party is in the same position regarding organized labor in the province, said McGeer, who challenged the premier to bring in legislative controls on election spending.

There will be a bill before the next election, replied Barrett. His mandate doesn't run out until 1976, although many observers expect an election by the fall of 1975. His predecessor, former premier W. A. C. Bennett, rarely went more than three years without an election.

Subsidized Drugs To Aid Low Incomes

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The provincial government is considering subsidizing prescription drugs for more people in the province, Human Resources Minister Norm Levi told the British Columbia Pharmacy Conference here Wednesday.

Levi told an estimated 75 pharmacists the government is committed to provide the same benefits for low income families enjoyed by welfare recipients.

He said there are currently 150,000 children in the province in families with income less than $5,500 a year and only 50 per cent of them live in welfare-assisted families.

"These low income families will be entitled to the same medical benefits as welfare families" Levi promised,.

The human resources minister also indicated the government was considering paying the entire formula cost for families qualifying for assistance under the prescription drug subsidy program.

"We thought the patient could pay the fee and the government pick up the other costs," Levi said.

The government currently pays half the cost of the drugs, with the patient paying 50 per cent plus the pharmacist's fee.

'LUCRATIVE' SCHOOL CLOSED BY CUBANS

HAVANA (Reuter) — Cuban authorities have closed Havana's only private school saying it had become "too lucrative" a business for its teachers and staff, informed sources said today.

The Hillside College, situated in the posh district of Miremar, taught children of Western diplomats and technicians up to high-school standard.

Education in Cuba is entirely state-controlled and free. But the school's main advantage was that its courses were devoid of political influence.

The British and Canadian embassies, joint sponsors of the school, were told Tuesday that it "violated the norms by which it had been authorized to function," informed sources said.

Cuban authorities also said the school had become "too lucrative an activity for its staff." Most of the teachers at the school were Cubans waiting for exit visas and not allowed to work for state concerns.

APPLICATION FOR A PERMIT UNDER THE POLLUTION CONTROL ACT, 1967 (REFUSE)

This application is to be filed with the Director, Pollution Control Branch, Parliament Buildings, British Columbia. Any person who qualifies as an objector under section 13 (2) of the Pollution Control Act, 1967, may, within 30 days of the date of application, or within 30 days of the date of publication in The British Columbia Gazette or in a newspaper, or, where service is required, within 30 days of the serving of a copy of the application, file with the Director an objection in writing to the granting of a permit, stating the manner in which he is affected. Those who do not so qualify may file with the Pollution Control Board an objection in writing under section 13 (6), in the same manner and time as described above.

1. I, Canadian Puget Sound Lumber & Timber Company Limited of Jordan River, B.C., hereby apply to the Director for a permit to discharge refuse from Jordan River Community, located at River Jordan, and give notice of my application to all persons affected.
2. The refuse-disposal site shall be located at Lot 114, Renfrew Land District, which is approximately 600 feet North and 2000 feet West of the South-west corner of Section 4, Renfrew Land District.
3. The type of refuse to be discharged shall be Domestic, Commercial, Industrial waste.
4. The quantity of refuse to be discharged shall be as follows:
   Average daily discharge (based on operating period): 1½ yards;
   The operating period during which the refuse will be discharged shall be 2-3 times a week.
5. The nature or characteristics (in per cent by weight) of the refuse to be discharged is estimated to be as follows: 85% Household refuse, 5% Commercial refuse e.g. cardboard containers and cartons, etc., 10% Industrial refuse e.g. containers, tires, scrap metal, etc.
6. The type of treatment to be applied to the refuse is as follows: Sanitary landfill.
7. I, Dennis A. Young, Executive Director, hereby certify that a copy of this application has been received by the Regional District of Capital Regional District.
   Dennis A. Young.
8. This application, dated on the 27th day of May, 1974, was posted on the ground in accordance with the Pollution Control regulations.

Arthritis Drug Saved Dozen

TORONTO (CP) — An experimental drug for treating rheumatoid arthritis victims prevented 12 of 17 patients from becoming severely crippled by the disease, Dr. Murray B. Urowitz of Toronto reported.

He told a news conference at the Pan American Congress on Rheumatic Diseases that treatment of the patients with the drug, azathiopine, began in Toronto more than four years ago. The 12 for whom the drug worked are active and able to work, he said.

It is not a "magic" potion but "every little bit of progress counts," said Dr. Urowitz. "Today we rarely condemn a person to a wheelchair."

One of every 50 Canadians suffers rheumatoid arthritis and of these up to 15 per cent are crippled by the disease.

Dr. Urowitz said there is little doubt the 12 who did respond to the drug have followed the same course as the five whose condition became worse.

The drug is expected to be licensed by the federal government for treatment of rheumatoid arthritis later this year, he said.

Abortion Law Passed

BONN (AFP) — Abortion during the first three months of pregnancy became legal in West Germany Tuesday. President Gustav Heinemann signed into law a bill passed by the West German Bundestag with an absolute majority.

Japanese Rice Said Dangerous

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Anyone who eats Japanese rice may risk stomach cancer, warns a pathologist from the Medical College of Wisconsin.

Dr. Thomas T. Tang, an assistant clinical professor of pathology at the school and head of the pathology department at Milwaukee Children's Hospital, said, "I think it's a public problem and the public should be notified."

In an article in the June issue of the Archives of Pathology, researchers found intact particles of Talc, which is used to coat the rice, within cancer cells taken from six Japanese with stomach cancer.

Talc is used exclusively by the Japanese, who who say it enhances the appearance and to a degree the taste of the rice. Japan has the highest rae of stomach cancer in the world, about 50 cases per 100,000 population.

Alberta Voters Experiencing Low-Profile Bid by Parties

By STEPHANIE KERR
Special to the Times

CALGARY — All is quiet on the election front in Alberta—and it appears it is going to stay that way.

Candidates are running low-profile campaigns, concentrating on the personal touch with dooor-knocking and mainstreeting.

Some of the hopefuls say the time just isn't good for any election.

And some, outside of the Conservative party, admit that a full-scale, expensive campaign just isn't worth it in a province which is so strongly Tory.

The campaign this year is in sharp contrast to the battle waged by all parties in the last election in October, 1972.

One reason advanced for this is that several of the major areas for campaigning — the post-secondary institutes, are now closed.

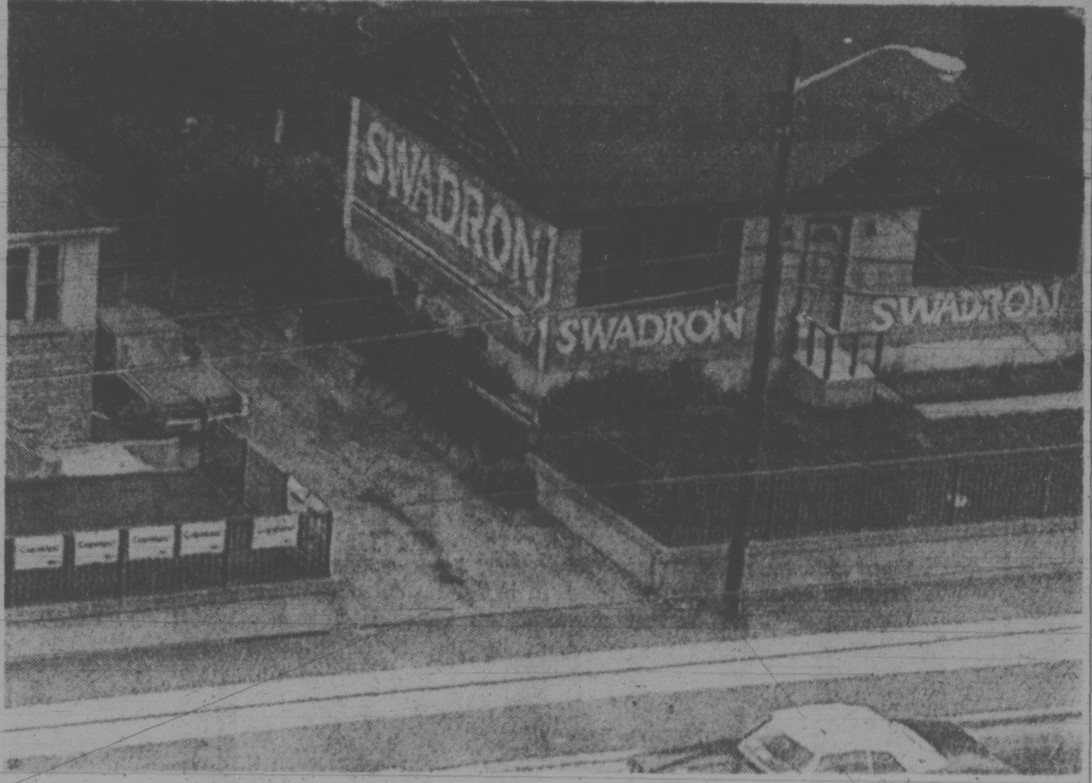
Last time around, candidates were being invited to service club forums and to high schools.

This time, the students are preparing for final examinations and the service clubs are meeting less frequently because of holidays.

Many people are getting ready for vacations and will be heading out of town as soon as school is finished, cutting down not only on the number of rallies and forums but also leading observers to predict a low turnout at the polls.

The appearance of John Turner, finance minister, at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon at the Calgary Inn June 21 is expected to add some heat to the campaign.

A demonstration of oil and gas company employees, similar to the one which greeted Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, is in the works.



Toronto neighbors make it clear who they support

The Extremes in Vote Luring

Canadian Press

When Rocky Valentini decided to support the Progressive Conservative candidate in York Centre riding, he planned more than a small cardboard window sign.

Mr. Valentini, a Toronto barber, painted his entire house Conservative blue, and adorned it with huge red and white letters spelling out SWADRON, the name of the Conservative candidate.

Painting a house for an election might seem a little extreme, but a cross-Canada survey shows that it may be a lot easier—legally speaking—than posting two-foot by four-foot signs in some communities.

Restrictions on signs vary widely from town to town. For instance, in Regina, there are no regulations, but in Victoria and some o fthe Metropolitan Toronto boroughs bylaws govern when signs can be posted, their size and when they must be taken down.

About the only general rules across the country require permission from owners before signs are posted on private property and keeping sign posters away from utility poles and other public property.

Don Flemming, a Nova Scotia Power Corp. spokesman, said workmen have been injured by staples and nails used to tack posters to poles. The provincially-owned corporation has prohibited signs on its poles.

Similar rules are enforced by other power companies, But they except voters' lists and any other material necessary under the Canada Elections Act.

Aside from those rules, regulations vary so much that the national offices of the Liberal, Progressive Conservative and New Democrat parties have left signs and posters under control of provincial campaign committes, asking only that they observe local bylaws.

But the NDP also asks that "they use common sense and not shower a neighborhood with four-by-eight foot billboards."

On paper, the toughest regulations are in Vancouver where officially no signs are permitted on public or private property. But the rules are bent during election campaigns to allow posters.

The city asks politicians to restrict signs to private property and to remove them soon after the election. If the signs are not taken down, a warning is issued and, if necessary, city work crews remove the posters, sending bills to the parties.

"Every election, someone gets billed," a city spokesman said. "But it's no big deal."

In Victoria, campaign posters come under a temporary sign bylaw which requires a $1 permit, limits signs to less than 100 square feet in area and requires that they be taken down within 60 days after the permit is issued.

Campaign organizers in Toronto face a welter of regulations in the city's boroughs. The bylaws, which vary from borough to borough, regulate size o fsigns, say when they can be put up and taken down and provide fines of up to $1,000 for failure to comply.

In the borough of Etobicoke, an emergency crew is sent out after dark to take down signs on public property. There is no fine, but the candidate is informed of the infraction.

Politicians in Winnipeg have been fined in the past for ignoring a city bylaw prohibiting posting of campaign signs.

They had to pay court costs and the price of repainting damaged utility poles.

MONTREAL TOUGH

Montreal city council refuses permission to post signs on city property, or telephone and hydro poles. Signs on private property must be removed within 30 days after the election.

Most other Quebec towns and cities require permission from councils before signs or banners can be posted. Breaking the regulations can bring a maximum $100 fine.

In Edmonton, regulations prevent posting of signs on public property.

In Nova Scotia, campaign workers generally are free to post their literature at will. Aside from protecting private proverty rights and a prohibition against posters on utility poles, the only rules govern signs along highways.

No signs are permitted along freeways, but posters are allowed beside other highways provided they do not obstruct traffic signs.

Campaign signs can be posted on public property in St. John's, Nfld., with city council approval. Permission usually is granted if the signs do not interfere with traffic direction and public rights-of-way.

Politicians in Charlottetown must use cardboard or paper signs. Permission to use wooden billboards must be granted by the town planning commission.

Saint John, N.B., like Regina, has no regulations covering signs. But one country official in Saint John also left the door ajar on possible problems for the campaigners.

"No one would blame people if they tore this stuff down when they see it," he said.

Nutritional Plan Soon To Cabinet

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal cabinet will soon be studying an over-all plan to remedy the nation's nutritional ills, probably before the July 8 general election, says Dr. A. B. Morrison, assistant deputy minister of health.

His announcement follows the resignation last month of two federal nutrition experts, supposedly because of delays and disputes in planning a national nutrition program.

Dr. Z. I. Sabry, who co-ordinated the $2.5 million federal Nutrition Canada study, has already left his post, while Dr. Allan Forbes, director of the nutrition bureau since last year, resigned effective July 7.,

Dr. Morrison, chief of the health protection branch which encompasses the nutrition bureau, discounted recent criticism of his departnent's nutrition program by Dr. Sabry.

The Nutrition Canada program is not on the verge of expiring and the nutrition bureau is not cutting staff, Dr. Morrison said in an interview.

He was commenting on statements by Dr. Sabry, who criticized the alleged failure of the government to deal with malnutrition when he spoke at the Canadain Dietetic Association conference this week in Toronto.

Dr. Morrison said he was not authorized to divulge details of the nutrition plan which is to go before the cabinet.

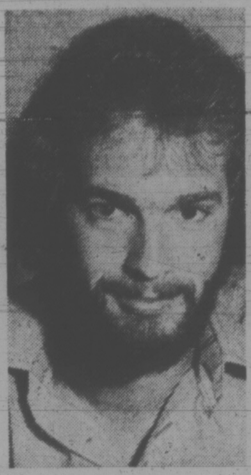
Man Saved In Dramatic City Rescue



STEEDS
. . . grabbed old man

An elderly man is alive today as a result of a dramatic rescue early this morning by a passenger in a taxi.

William Sutherland, believed in his 80s, was taken from his third-floor room in the Fairfield Hotel, 710 Cormorant, by Wayne Steeds, 21, of 784 West Gorge, after Steeds entered Sutherland's burning room.

Steeds said today he had called a cab while on the 900-block Douglas and had planned to go to a restaurant.

Steeds said that within moments of getting in a Bluebird cab, taxi driver Don Marnell spotted flames in one of the hotel's windows.

Marnell radioed for the fire department.

The pair continued down Douglas to the restaurant, then Steeds said: "We better turn around and see if we can do something back there.

"When we got back we both jumped out of the car, then Don boosted me up the fire escape and I climbed to the top."

Steds kicked in a window.

"The smoke was really heavy and I couldn't breathe, so I backed off."

After being on the balcony for about 30 seconds, Steeds "just took a breath and went in."

He noticed a man standing in a corner, and "just grabbed him and threw him and myself out the door."

After telling Sutherland to go downstairs, Steeds set off the fire alarm, found an extinguisher, kicked down the door which had locked, and re-enered the room.

He used the extinguisher on an old cushion chair.

The flames were on the chair, walls and curtain.

Fire Insp. Alex Satchwell said Steeds saved Sutherland's life. Sutherland was unharmed.

Damage was estimated at $1,500 to the room and furniture.

After the fire was over Steeds went back to the restaurant and finally had something to eat.

Strike Restricts Hospital

KELOWNA (CP) — A study session by 288 members of the British Columbia Hospital Employees' Union at Kelowna General Hospital today effectively shut down most hospital services.

Union members walked off their jobs at 10:20 a.m. protesting what they say is an assualt on one of their members by a hospital supervisor several weeks ago. No reason was given for the incident.

Ray McCready, BCHEU Okanagan Kootenay regional servicing representative, said the unidentified union member required hospital treatment after being assaulted by an unnamed hospital supervisor.

Hospital administrator Colin Elliott said he will seek a court injunction ordering the union members back to work. He said the action by the BCHEU is illegal under the terms of the existing contract.

He immediately ordered restrictions on all surgery, cutting back on admissions except in emergency cases, and the release of patients who no longer required total hospital care.

He added that the dispute is a matter which should be handled through arbitration.

4-MONTH LOW FOR GOLD

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Gold dropped to its lowest level in four months on London bullion exchanges today.

It started the day at $154 an ounce but declined slowly to a price of $151.75 at the afternoon official fixing, passing Wednesday's closing of $152.75.

Arts Dean President

VANCOUVER (CP) — Douglas Kenny, 51, dean of arts at the Uniiversity of British Columbia, was appointed Wednesday to succeed retiring UBC president Walter Gage, 69.

Gage retires in July, 1965, after six years as president.

Kenny was picked by the UBC board of governors after three weeks' deliberation, from a list of candidates submitted by student-faculty committees.

He has signed a five-year contract at $60,000 a year.

A teacher at UBC since 1950, Kenny began his bachelor of arts degree at Victoria College in 1941 and completed it at UBC in 1945. He received a master's degree in psychology from UBC in 1947, and in 1952, was awarded a doctorate by the University of Washington while lecturing at UBC.

Teacher Ends 2-Week Vigil

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Teacher Ingrid Blanchet broke her fast and her two-week vigil on the legislature steps Wednesday night and today claimed a partial victory in her protest of bureaucracy and school board hiring practices.

Before leaving for her home in West Vancouver this morning, the 52-year-old kindergarten-primary teacher issued a typed statement saying Education Minister Eileen Dailly and B.C. Teachers' Federation president Jim McFarlan would look into her complaints.

"I feel I have accomplished something at least," she said.

The teacher completed her 14th day of protest on the steps of the legislature Wednesday and left at about 10 p.m. She claimed she had been discriminated against by school boards seeking kindergarten teachers while unwilling to pay the premium salaries required by high qualifications.

Mrs. Blanchet still has no offers of a teaching post in September and is considering returning to her last post in Prince Rupert which, she said, caused her mental anguish due to poor conditions.

"She mentioned she might have to go back," said her son Ian in West Bancouver, who expected his mother home this afternoon.

The teacher received a telegram from the Prince Rupert school board Tuesday instructing her to return or face action for breach of contract.

According to Mrs. Blanchet, she has a right to demand an inquiry by the BCTF into her allegations about hiring practices, but despite the implied assurance from McFarlan, she said in her statement: "I have had no success in being granted an inquiry into what I have stated was unethical practice having to do with tampering of principal's report on myself by a member of the Vancouver school board in 1972 when I resigned from that board."

'Common Destiny' For NATO

OTTAWA (WP) — The United States and its North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies — including France Wednesday closed a stormy period in their postwar relations by adopting a 14-point declaration asserting their "common destiny."

U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, who set in motion a European-American diaolgue in April 1973, said the U.S. was "satisfied" with the outcome. At an Ottawa press conference, Kissinger said that President Nixon would sign the declaration with other heads of government in Brussels next Wednesday in order to give it "an adequate solemnity."

The declaration itself was a comprise which fell short of Kissinger's proposed "new Atlantic Charter." But many here were pleased that any document was adopted at all given the angry conflicts that have married Atlantic unity since the Middle East war.

Many top NATO officials were ebullient after two days of discussions.

There were strong signs that the meeting had produced a new harmony between the Europeans and Americans on futher steps in the Middle East and in the

Fraser Flooding Near Emergency

By the Canadian Press

The Fraser River continued to rise Wednesday after increasing more than a foot since Tuesday, triggering emergency procedures in the lower mainland and Fraser Valley.

Flood reading was 21.04 feet above sea level at Mission Wednesday, up from 19.89 feet Tuesday.

Dike patrols began on both sides of the river and Chilliwack epened an emergency operations room.

Further measures will begin when the river tops 22 feet.

Several thousand acres of prime farm land and grazing land was under water at Clearwater, about 75 miles north of Kamloops, after the North Thompson River flooded its banks.

Most cattle were able to move to higher ground, but there were scattered areas where groups of cattle were marooned on small islands.

There were no evacuations, although some children had to be taken by boat to catch a morning school bus.

The Fraser continued to rise at Prince George, and water resource experts there predicted the river would continue to rise for another week before peaking for the year.

This means levels at Mission may increase for the next 10 days, although cooler weather predicted to arrive in two days in southern B.C. could slow runoff.

A major problem will come during the weekend when the coast is hit by tides of up to 15.6 feet. The tides, particularly if accompanied by westerly winds, can affect the Fraser River nearly as far as Chilliwack.

HYDRO GETS STRIKE NOTICE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Seventy-two-hour strike notice was served Wednesday on British Columbia Hydro by the Office and Technical Employees Union, Local 378, representing more than 2,300 whitecollar employees.

Union president Fred Trotter said the OTEU "is hopeful both parties will recognize their responsibility to the public and make every effort to arrive at a satisfactory agreement within the next 14 days."

NEWS BRIEFS

28 Fires in Alberta

EDMONTON (CP) — The 1,154 firefighters battling 28 forest fires in northern Alberta continued their work today in temperatures that were forecast to hit 85 degrees.

"They're really going at it," an Alberta Forest Service spokesman said of the firefighters. Some have been on the fire line, with only breaks for sleep and food, since a lightning storm swept the area Saturday night, igniting 57 fires.

Refinery Blast

ROTTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — An explosion and fire tore through the huge Royal Dutch-Shell refinery at Pernis today. First reports said five persons were injured. Damage was estimated at more than $1 million.

Highest Bank Rate

PARIS (AFP) — The bank of France raised its bank rate today to 13 per cent from 11. The new rate compares with the British figure of 12¼ per cent, which is next highest.

Strike End Ordered

LISBON (AFP) — The postal workers trade union today ordered its 35,000 members to end a strike, which began three days ago, and return to work. The work stoppage is to back-pay demands.

Mica Creek Fire

NELSON (CP) — About 44 men using six bulldozers battled forest fires in southeastern British Columbia Wednesday.

A spokesman for the British Columbia Forest Service said the largest fire of the 30 fires was in the Mica Creek area and covered 180 acres.

10-Pact Tie-Up Nearing End

Tentative agreement was reached by negotiators for B.C. contractors and a major bloc of unions early today.

The policy conference of the 10-pact group of unions which bargain jointly was meeting this afternoon in Vancouver and was expected to recommend acceptance to union members.

Ratification votes would likely take a week to be completed.

Locals of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners on Vancouver Island will vote on the policy conference's recommendation Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, said John Schibli, president of Victoria Local 1598.

The Victoria local of the carpenters union will meet Wednesday at 4:30 p.m. in the Union Centre, he said.

Cy Stairs, chief negotiator for the 10-pact, said nothing was signed but there should be no problem."

Chuck Connaghan, president of Construction Labor Relations Association, representing 850 contractors, said there was "some movement" in the industry's last offer but he would not elaborate.

CIRA's last offer called for a wage and fringe benefit increase of $2.90 an hour in a two-year contract with 85 cents an hour as the first increment.

But a major point of contention was the 10-pact's proposal for a cost-of-living clause. CIRA had said the package offer was a sufficient hedge against inflation.

Six other unions bargaining with CIRA but separately from the 10-pact have reached settlements which include the $2.90 package and either $1 or $1.10 an hour as the first increment and a contract reopener after one year on the cost of living.

Only unions outside the 10-pact still to need agreements are the Vancouver and Kamloops locals of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the boilermakers union. The glaziers union is voting on a settlement now.

Vancouver electrical workers began a strike May 1 and the 10-pact followed a week later. Selective striking has occurred elsewhere in the province, including three Victoria building sites.

The 10-pact unions include carpenters and piledrivers, cement masons and plasterers, laborers, sheet metal workers and roofers, machinists, insulators, culinary workers, operating engineers, bricklayers, and painters.

IWA STILL PONDERING

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

Negotiators for the International Woodworkers of America failed Wednesday to reach agreement on whether to recommend acceptance or rejection of a contract offer the industry has termed "final."

Today, 48 hours after the offer was made, there was still no word from the IWA's coast negotiating committee, which was meeting in a Vancouver Hotel.

Although IWA regional president Jack Munro, chairman of the negotiating committee, called the offer "terrific," it was apparent that opinion was not shared by everyone.

The union called leaders of the nine coast locals to Vancouver to go over the contract offer with them and there was speculation the negotiating committee might approach Forest Industrial Relations, the industry's bargaining agency, to discuss 36 items.

The committee's dilemma grew from FIR's negotiating tactics, in which seven successive proposals were made, each one just a little bit better than the last one.

As one observer put it: "It's too much to turn down and not enough to accept. But how much more is there? And if we go out, it's going to be a real war."

Already, contrary to official

Caouette Cold On Controls

The Canadian Press

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette vowed Wednesday to vote against price and wage controls if the Progressive Conservatives are elected and his party holds the balance of power in Parliament after the July 8 election.

Caouette told reporters in Chicoutimi, Que., that controls will not stop inflation and Social Credit MPs will oppose any attempt to implement them.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield has called for a maximum 90-day freeze of prices and wages followed by 18 months to two years of lesser controls.

Details of the second phase of the plan would be worked out in consultation with industry, labor and business during the period when the freeze was in effect.

Caouette repeated his call for a 25-per-cent discount on all retail prices. Such a program could be financed by the Bank of Canada with subsidies paid to retailers. Retail prices would fall accordingly and consumer purchasing power would rise, he argued.

Stanfield, at a rally in Cranbrook, reiterated that controls are needed to break what he calls an inflation psychosis among Canadians.

In his remarks to the open-air crowd of about 300, he criticized resource industry taxation proposals announced in the defeated Liberal budget. If implemented, the tax changes would be bad for federalism because they would strain federal-provincial relations and leave resource industries caught in the crossfire, he said.

Later, at an outdoor evening rally in Calgary, Stanfield attacked the minority Liberal government for its handling of federal-provincial energy negotiatiions.

For months, he said, Prime Minister Trudeau followed a policy of confrontation with oil-producing provinces. He gave Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed a large measure of credit for the national oil-price agreement that was negotiated in March by Trudeau and provincial premiers.

The prime minister has cited the agreement repeatedly during the campaign as an example of strong leadership by his government.

David Lewis, New Democratic Party leader, campaigned Wednesday in Winnipeg where he defended his own anti-inflation policies at a news conference.

He said the NDP proposal of a two-price system for basic Canadian-produced commodities — one price at home and a higher price for exports — would give the consumers a much-needed break.

Canadians now are being hurt unfairly by inflated world prices because some companies are telling consumers to pay the higher international price or do without, he said.

Lewis said the two-price system, already in effect on wheat and oil, should be broadened to include lumber, steel, natural gas, fertilizer, newsprint and salmon.

Mine Men Here To Blast Bill 31

Prospectors, geologists and mining engineers arrived in Victoria today for the first stage of a hopped-for massive two-day demonstration against the Mineral Royalties Act.

Their arrival follows closely on the heels of the final debate of the bill in the legislature.

Bill 31 passed through committee stage approval late Wednesday afternoon, and with the last major legislative hurdle completed MLAs will likely give it official third reading approval today without further discussion.

Outside the legislature this morning security guards cleared the front driveway in expectation of the protesters while organizers for the demonstration were surveying the area.

Save Our Jobs Committee spokesman Bill Slewridge, a former mining union organizer and a member of the Majority Movement, said

Company Profits Climb 45.7%

OTTAWA (CP) — Industrial corporation profits after taxes climbed 45.7 per cent in the first quarter of 1974, substantially above totals recorded in the similar period for 1973, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

Combined with a rise in sales of 24 per cent, the figures indicate a significant average increase in profit margins of the companies.

The Statistics Canada figures show that actual estimated after-tax profits were $2.164 billion — an increase of $679 million over the first three months of 1973.

Sales during the first three months of 1974 jumped to a total of $41.8 billion, up $8.1 billion over the same period for 1973.

Similar figures for the first quarter of 1973 showed that corporate profits increased by 34 per cent over the first quarter of 1972. Profits for the first three months last year increased 53 per cent over the last quarter of 1972.

The rapid rise in corporate profits last year drew strong criticism from New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis and from labor unions. The new figures could revive that criticism, particularly in view of the federal election.

Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, campaigning in Winnipeg, said the figures indicated that "the atmosphere is appropriate for the period of controls we've been urging.

"These profit figures clearly indicate business is in a position to aborb increased costs during the freeze period we have in mind."

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Herb Gray had no comment on the figures as he entered a cabinet meeting today.

"Have you tried Mr. Turner," he said, referring to Finance Minister John Turner. Mr. Turner was not at the meeting.

The recent increases in profits came after a seven-per-cent decline in 1970 but industry has since made a strong recovery in its profit levels while expanding production.

Assets of the companies climbed to a total of about $120 billion, up 14.5 per cent over the same period in 1973. The Statistics Canada figures

CALGARY LIVESTOCK

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 11 a.m. today from the Calgary Public Stockyards totalled 600 head, mostly slaughter cattle lacking quality with the bulk being cows. Trade was dull with a narrow demand.

A few slaughter steers weighing more than 1,000 pounds were on offer, selling about steady. Steers under 1,000 pounds were under pressure, discounted $3 to $4. Heifers were $1 lower with lightweights discounted $3 to $5. Good cows sold unevenly steady.

Steers, A1, A2: 47.50-49.90.

Heifers, A1, A2: 38.50-40.50.

Cows, D1, D2: 27-30. D3: 23-26, D4: 18-20.

Replacements were mostly yearling steers meeting an indifferent demand at barely steady prices. Good feeder steers more than 600 pounds: 38-43.

No hogs were sold to 11 a.m.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — A weakening trend in Vancouver rapeseed after mid session dropped prices as much as 20 cents under previous close levels at the close Thursday on the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange.

Sellers outnumbered buyers throughout most of the day's trading, but the impact on prices wasn't felt until late in the session. There was no trading in Thunder Bay rapeseed, and trading in flax and rye was light.

Flax prices remained down by as much as 12 cents. Rye was the only commodity to advance and posted gains of as much as seven cents.

Wednesday's volume of trade was 396,000 bushels of flax, 1,260,000 of rapeseed and 995,000 of rye.

CHICAGO (AP) — Farm commodity futures maintained gains of 5 to 16 cents a bushel through much of the session on the Board of Trade Thursday but only wheat futures closed with a solid gain.

Corn and soybean prices were irregular at the close and oats were down 5 cents. Soybean meal was mixed and soybean oil declined about 70 points.

Late in the session, a major exporter sold corn, soybeans and wheat and it was theorized that the firm was lifting hedges against previous sales of these grains abroad. This started a wild selling move in all the major pits and new lows for the day were set. One soy oil contract fell the limit of 100 points.

Then there began a new buying move, with short covering, and wheat rose to near limits again.

U.S. Making Comeback In Wheat

WASHINGTON (AP) New government figures on world grain supplies show the United States may rapidly gain back some of its standing among countries holding exportable reserves of wheat.

A similar assessment can be made for food grains such as corn, oats, barley and sorghum, although figures for those commodities have traditionally shown an overwhelming advantage for U.S. reserves.

Locking ahead to June 30, 1975—when this year's wheat crop will have gone to market—the agriculture department says that total wheat stocks held by the United States and its "major competitors" of Canada, Australia and Argentina will be 32.5 million metric tons.

Of that amount a year from now, some 12.2 million tons will be held by U.S. farmers and the grain trade and 20.3 million by the other three countries or a ratio of about 5-to-3 in favor of the foreign suppliers.

Ontario Tax Not Deductible

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario's 50-per-cent tax on land speculation profits is not considered deductible from federal income tax, a revenue department spokesman said Tuesday.

"I don't think we've ruled on it," the spokesman said, "but our interpretation is that it is not deductible for federal income tax purposes."

The federal spokesman, in the revenue department's tax avoidance branch, said Ottawa's position may not necessarily stand up in court.

"It's merely our interpretation. It doesn't mean that a court would not say it's deductible."

In Toronto, Ontario Revenue Minister Arthur Meen said Monday the tax may have to be reduced if the federal government does not allow it as a deductible expense.

Meen said he is surprised at the federal government's ruling because provincial officials assumed when the tax was announced that it would be deductible as a business expense from federal income or capital gains taxes.

He said that at the moment the federal ruling is "just a legal opinion."

Meen said if the ruling is final he will discuss "several alternatives" with his cabinet colleagues, including a possible court challenge.

Federal Finance Minister John Turner, who had said earlier that the provincial tax is an intrusion into federal taxing, was not available for comment.

The tax, in effect since April 9, has required land speculators to pay 50 per cent of all profits above the fair market value of the property before that date.

Arctic Air To Expand

OTTAWA (CP) — An application by Arctic Air Ltd. for authority to serve Wrigley and Norman Wells, N.W.T., and to move its base to Fort Nelson, B.C., from Fort Simpson, N.W.T., has been approved in part by the Canadian transport commission.

The commission denied the application to serve Norman Wells.

An application by Northward Airlines Ltd. to serve Wrigley and Fort Simpson only was denied. The commission issued another licence for Northward to serve Norman Wells, along with Wrigley and Fort Simpson. But Northern will not have any local traffic rights between Wrigley and Fort Simpson in either direction.

How to Treat a Visitor Without Actual Robbery

The ink was scarcely dry on our little whimsy earlier this week concerning Gordon Sinclair's rhapsody to the Americans when our town's leading tourist promoter was fuming on the phone.

It was his view, you see, that the piece was "anti-American" — gosh, how did he ever get that idea? — and he thought it was high time that we stopped being beastly to the Yanks. This will be our biggest-ever tourist year, thanks to the Americans, said he, and we should do everything possible to make them feel at home.

If we see a U.S. licence place, said he, we should approach and sing out a cheery word of greeting. If one is parked alongside an expired meter we should slip in the appropriate coin. We should clam-up on any rude questions about Watergate or impeachment or such. Tourists, said he, want to be wanted and we should actually have an organized effort to love the stranger in our midst.

A similar plan, I gather, was attempted last year in Chicago where the tourist groups inaugurated "Hello Week," calculated to break the customary ice between residents and non-residents. It seems to have been something short of a spectacular success and crept into history along with "Eat More Turnips Week" and the rest, though, of course, what was a failure in Chicago need not be a failure in Victoria even if it most likely will be.

Naturally, we want to discourage any overt rudeness to American visitors. I, myself, would apply the same rule that I do in my home, never to say a harsh word to a guest unless he asks for it. But that's about as far as I'm prepared to go to encourage tourist and I think it's far enough.

The deeply ingrained idea that the smiling stranger is out to rob you blind is now such a part of the big city attitude that it seems to preclude any possibility of the calculated hospitality recommended by my caller.

Indeed his interest is, in part, linked with the notion of graciusly parting the tourist from a maximum hunk of his bankroll and it may just be that, on those terms, he won't want to be wanted at all. There is, you see, a difference between being wanted and being had.

I hate to segue again into that familiar city-versus-country bit, but it must be done to make the point that nothing will work with the tourist except sincerity.

No villager would dream of passing an unfamiliar face without at least a nod of recognition. On the country roads where I now spend most of my time it is the practice for drivers, though they may be total strangers, to lift a palm in greeting or even thumb a barp on the klaxon, a signal of good cheer which sends each on his way with his spirits lifted an inch or more.

Unhappily, it is not this way in the city and, indeed, strangers who pass each other feel compelled to hood their eyes so that there will be no invasion of the formidable fortress of privacy.

Even at close quarters — in crowded elevators, for example — everyone seems rigidly resolved to disprove the theory that no man is an island unto himself. Eyes front, hostile, aloof, distrustful, distant, they rise or plummet to their tiny destinies with the appearance of mortal enemies.

A man never realizes this so deeply as he does when he's in a friendless city and yearns for some human companionship or, at least, recognition that he exists. It is the only commodity not to be found in the yellow pages of the telephone directory that, chances are, he'll end up reading in his lonely hotel room.

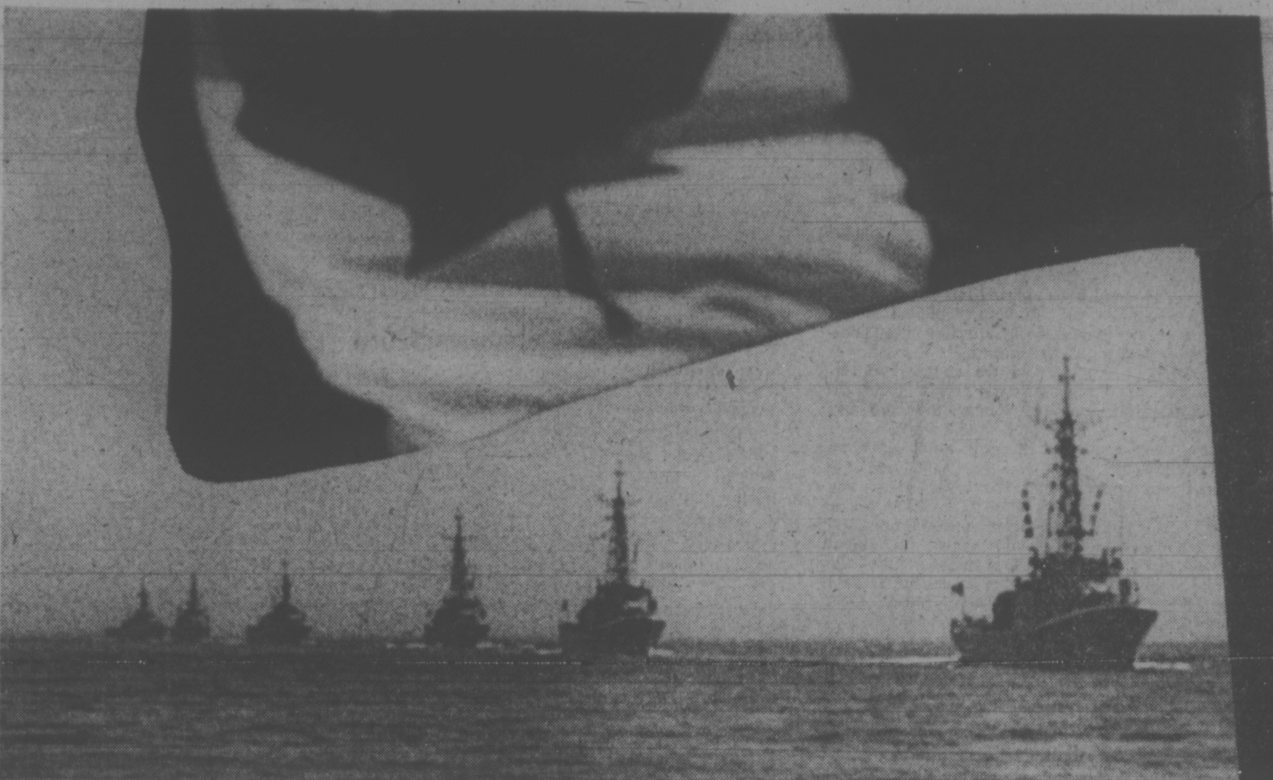
It is a truism of travel that the greater the density of population the greater the prospect of being alone. I have myself, felt a kind of panic in places like New York's teeming Times Square in the knowledge that the only way I might establish contact would be with a piercing cry of "Help!"

There are many reasons for this, apart from the suspicion that a stranger who put a coin in your expired parking meter or said hello would surely be up to no good.

One reason is that the iron mask of shyness settles on people who are among foreigners, an attitude caused by the fear of being repulsed. A man hates to cast out the first smile when the odds are high, he knows, that it won't bounce back.

That works both ways. I just know that if I step up to a car with Oregon licence plates and sing out a cheery hello to the occupants the driver will, sure as shooting, inquire, "What are you selling, Bub?" and I wouldn't blame him if he did.

Better, say I, to just let the Americans enjoy our scenery, which is what they came for, and not embarrass them with hypocrisy.



Two-Way Salute By Ships

It was truly a ships of the line situation Wednesday when 14 ships of the Pacific command went through their paces off Beacon Hill Park.

Seen in the sailpast that drew a large gallery are the six destroyer-escorts that formed part of the parade, HMCS Gatineau leads, followed by HMCS Terra Nova, HMCS Restigouche, HMCS St. Croix, HMCS Mackenzie and HMCS Saskatchewan.

The sailpast was a two-barrelled salute. It hearlded the beginning of Canada Week and bade a ceremonial farewell to the submarine HMCS Rainbow, going through her last monouevres with the fleet. She goes into mothballs Aug. 1.

ARSON PROBED IN HOUSE FIRE

The provincial fire marshal's office is investigating the possibility of arson in a fire that destroyed a new house at 273 Portsmouth in Colwood early this morning.

Colwood RCMP placed the loss at $30,000. A spokesman said the house, just completed, was empty.

Origin of the fire, which was reported at 4:30 a.m., has not yet been determined. Twenty-two firemen from the Colwood Volunteer Fire department were at the scene for more than two hours.

Police said the inside of the home was gutted and the roof destroyed.

Saanich to Protest Crofton Pollutants

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

A retired chemical engineer living near Prospect Lake in Saanich says poisons in pollutants belched from the B.C. Forest Products pulp mill at Crofton are "an awful nuisance" on his property.

After hearing Joseph Rockey, 4721 Mountain Road, Saanich council's environment committee Wednesday recommended aldermen take the complaint to the provincial pollution control branch and the company.

Rockley, who has had 40 years experience, has also written to Health Minister Dennis Cocke.

Retired six months, Rockley spent the last 20 years practising his profession exclusively in the pulp and paper industry.

"The gases and vapors originating from the alkaline pulping mill are strong poisons and highly noxious, causing great discomfort," he told the committee.

Rockley stated that, although his home was 25 miles from the mill, "natural obstacles such as land promontories, the sea, the forests and mountains did not prevent the concentration of hydrogen sulphide and mercaptons — pollutants generated at pulp mills — being not only noticeable but being also an awful nuisance."

These were particularly troublesome, he said, when there was a near-northerly wind.

Rockley said Scandinaviane equipment to deal with the problem had been available in Canada for some time.

"Some sectors of the industry resisted or assumed inert positions in combating air pollution for financial, rather than technical reasons."

When properly installed, anti-pollution equipment could result in savings to the mills by the recapture of chemicals that otherwise would be lost in the atmosphere, Rockley said.

He added he had received complaints, probably because they knew his profession and his knowledge of the situation, from people as far away as Gordon Head.

Rockley said it was common knowledge the pulp and paper industry is enjoying "unexpected windfall profits on account of world-wide shortages of pulp."

"There should be, therefore, substantial improvement to cash generation and flow in the position of any pulp mill, permitting for large and extraordinary capital expenditure to combat air pollution."

'Council Trying To Brush Me Under the Rug'

Victoria Indian carver Allan Poelzer said today city council is just trying to "shut me up and brush me under the rug like they've always done."

In the latest move, the finance committee referred his request for a licence back to city council next Thursday.

Poelzer wants to sell his carvings on the sidewalk outside Eaton's and has been trying for more than a month to get a trades licence.

"It looks like they might give us (he and his wife Gloria) a licence to sell in Centennial Square — but that's just Desolation Square," Poelzer said today.

"Who's going to go down there in January, February and March to buy a totem pole from us when we're starving?"

He charged Wednesday his application was rejected because of racial prejudice.

Council must unanimously reject Poelzer's request for a licence, city solicitor Jakob de Villiers told the committee today.

If the vote is not unanimous, he said, Poelzer can apply for his licence in the normal way and probably receive it.

Council last week rejected Poelzer's request by a 5-4 vote. Mayor Peter Pollen cast the deciding vote.

Pollen today called "entirely irresponsible" comments made by Poelzer Wednesday calling the mayor a "two-bit four-flusher of a used car salesman."

He said he found "most reprehensible" Poelzer's "acting like a damn fool and threatening great threats against an individual's business."

Poelzer had threatened to take over city hall and Pollen's car business next Tuesday; but said today he would take no action until he had final word from the council meeting Thursday.

Ald. Bill Tindall suggested a site on private property could be found for Poelzer instead.

"That would be the solution to this specific problem," he said.

All committee members agreed some procedure must be worked out for handling requests for on-street selling.

Two similar applications for trade licences were rejected by the committee this morning — one to sell snacks on the new promenade on the Inner Harbor and another to sell fresh fruit on streets and sidwalks.

Two more applications, both to sell paintings around the Inner Harbor, were tabled.

Navy Retrieves Drifting Tug

A 38-foot tug was towed safely into the Dockyard this morning by the destroyer-escort HMCS Mackenzie after two men abandoned her in the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

David Gray of Coquitlam and an unidentified companion thought their craft was in danger of sinking.

The 38-foot Vancouver-based Vanlene was found drifting about three miles south of Sheringham Point, where the men had left her.

A spokesman for the Sooke Motel said he was awakened at 1 a.m. by the two men, who had apparently used the tug's dory to make their way to shore. They had roused the occupants of a house and been driven to the motel.

"I was told the ship was foundering and the waves were quite heavy. The tug's engine had stalled."

He said Gray and his companion left the tug because she had a steel hull, which they thought would make her sink faster.

The Victoria Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt received a call at 3 a.m., reporting the tug was adrift in the strait.

The Mackenzie answered the general marine broadcast and took the tug under tow.

Object of Uplands Hunt May Be a Non-Cougar

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

It could be called the case of the missing cougar.

Or a case of mistaken identity.

Either way, a cougar reported Tuesday in Oak Bay's Uplands Park has vanished.

A hunt was carried out on the strength of three sightings — two by a man and his wife residing in the 2800-block Beach Drive, and one by a student constable with Oak Bay police.

The provincial fish and wildlife predator hunter, Dan Lay, came from Nanaimo with tracking dogs but despite a thorough search of the 75-acre parkland, was unable to pick up any scent.

Oak Bay police, quoting wildlife officials, said that was not conclusive evidence of a mistaken identity as a cougar's scent would probably not hold because of the hot, dry weather.

Provincial biologist Dr. Jim Hatter said it would not be unusual for a cougar to stray into settled area but he was skeptical.

He said it was the time of year cougars are given to prowling, especially toms looking for females . . . not people.

He said the government has received reports of cougars in the past but they have invariably turned out to be large dogs or even raccoons.

There is no question, though, cougars can and do inhabit the Saanich peninsula. One was shot with a tranquilizer gun at the airport a month ago, and taken to a less populated spot in the Nanaimo area.

On Aug. 17, 1955, one was observed standing on a rock viewing traffic near the Quadra-Patricia Bay intersection.

But it was a female couger that strayed into the city on the morning of April 26, 1926, that really startled Victorians. It wandered up Yates and stopped on the steps of the Public Library at Yates and Blanshard for a rest when it was shot by a police constable.

No less strange was an incident on June 8, 1961. Taxi driver Maurice Kozak driving down Douglas just after 4 a.m., saw a cougar strolling the sidewalk.

Police cars chased the cougar. A rifle shot wounded the animal, and as it crouched in the doorway of what is now the Government Street liquor store, it was shot to death.

Stolen Cheques Clearing Stores

Three of the 1,827 blank cheques stolen from four Victoria painting and decorating firms last weekend have turned up, cashed, netting thieves almost $1,000.

And Victoria fraud squad officers fear it could be just a start.

All three cheques were made out to Spartan Painters and Decorators, and were cashed Sunday, two at the Warehouse supermarket on Burnside, for $425 and $305, and one at the Maverick Market on Esquimalt for $267.50. In each case a man was the passer.

The cheques, drawn on the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, Douglas and Cormorant were stolen from the offices of the firms at 2912 Quesnel. The three other firms involved are B.C. Gypsum and Dry Wall, B.C. Gypsum Campbell River Ltd., and Coulter and Associates Construction Ltd.

ABNORMAL DIVE

A coroner's jury ruled Wednesday that the diving death of lawyer Richard Clay Ellis June 2 was due to his "abnormal diving procedure."

Ellis died from an air embolism after a dive off Saxe Point.

Divers with Ellis at the time tried unsuccessfully to revive him after he surfaced.

Ellis, 48, was the president of the Canadian Rugby Union at the time of his death.

NEW TRY TO OUST UNION

Employees of the Mediaeval Inn have fired off another letter to the Labor Relations Board in their latest attempt to stop union representation.

The employees were certified under Local 835 of the Beverage Dispensers and Culinary Workers Union last year, but the staff has changed since then and present workers don't want union coverage, spokesman Ulla Spech said.

The employees petitioned the Labor Relations Board two weeks ago to allow them to hold a vote on whether they want the union, but have not received an answer.

The second letter was sent Tuesday.

New People, Ideas for Bastion

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

A 12th season in which new people, new ideas and new techniques will prevail was outlined by president Hugh L. Henderson Wednesday at a Bastion Theatre press conference at the Empress Hotel.

Describing the performing arts in Canada as a vital Canadian industry, Henderson called Bastion "a major industry in this city."

He said the operating budget for next season will be $266,000 most of which is injected into the economic life of the community.

About one half of this amount must be generated as revenue, the balance coming from federal, provincial and corporate investment in the culture of the city.

Bastion has received a 130 per cent increase in its Canada Council grant this season — up to $70,000 from $30,000.

Other grants include $38,500 from the B.C. Cultural Fund and $14,000 from the Inter-municipal Committee.

But the income gap remains. Average costs per seat at the McPherson Playhouse, are $5.25, while potential revenues are $2.83 per subscriber or $3.50 for a single seat sale.

In pursuit of audiences Bastion is mounting a campaign to bring in 5,600 season ticket-holders. Last season there were 2,850.

The campaign target for funds is $130,000. Corporations and private sources will be approached by a team headed by Clare Copeland.

Already a $12,000 donation from Du-Maurier will sponsor the tour of three of the mainstage productions to up-Island centres and Rothmans will underwrite the theatre programs to $15,000.

Theatre as an economic investment will be stressed in the campaign rather than seeking the customary cultural handouts.

During its fourth professional year Bastion Theatre Company will employ more than 125 people, generate $120,000 in revenue and perform before an estimated minimum of 108,500 people.

Productions under consideration include Arsenic and Old Lace, Godspell, The Four Poster, an Eric Nicol play and either Alan Ayckbourn's comedy, Absurd Person Singular or Neil Simon's Sunshine Boys.

Artistic director Edwin Stephenson is in New Brunswick directing summer theatre and negotiating to bring noted Canadian actors John Colicos, Tom Kneebone, Dinah Christie, Frances Hyland and Leslie Yeo to Victoria.

The new season will also offer two more performances at convenient hours, a supper club, celebrity luncheons and probably a theatre bar.

Alberta Voters Experiencing Low-Profile Bid by Parties

By STEPHANIE KERR
Special to the Times

CALGARY — All is quiet on the election front in Alberta—and it appears it is going to stay that way.

Candidates are running low-profile campaigns, concentrating on the personal touch with dooor-knocking and mainstreeting.

Some of the hopefuls say the time just isn't good for any election.

And some, outside of the Conservative party, admit that a full-scale, expensive campaign just isn't worth it in a province which is so strongly Tory.

The campaign this year is in sharp contrast to the battle waged by all parties in the last election in October, 1972.

One reason advanced for this is that several of the major areas for campaigning — the post-secondary institutes, are now closed.

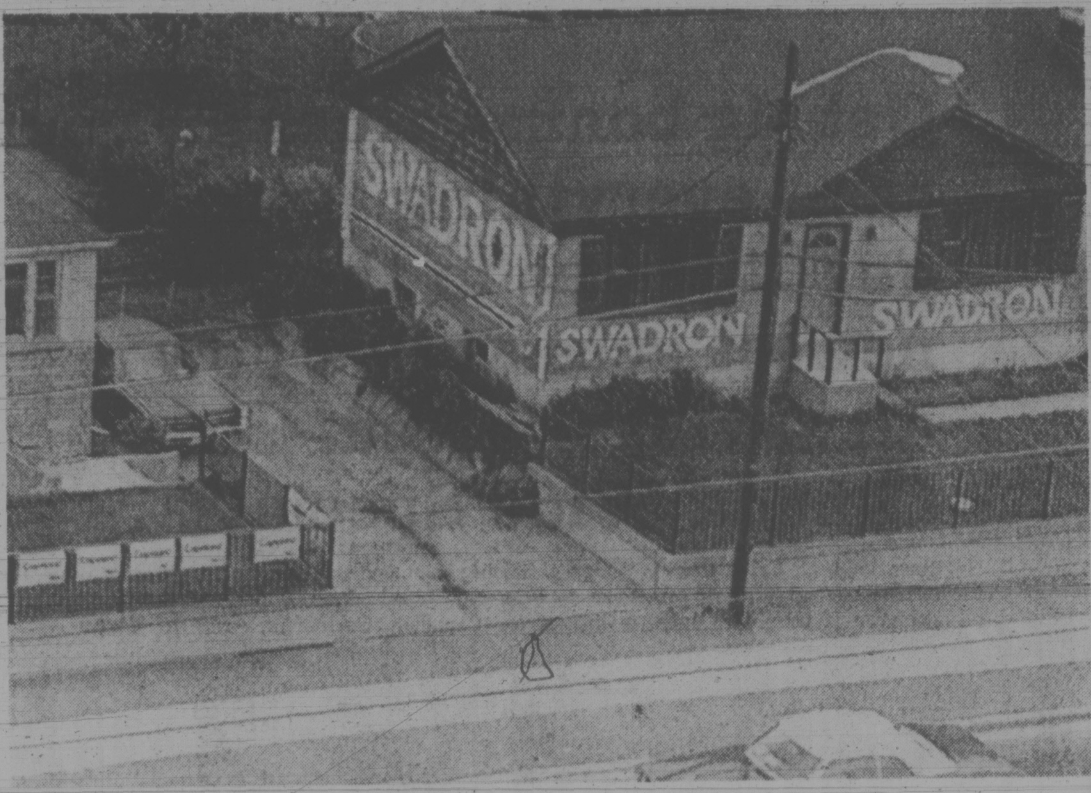
Last time around, candidates were being invited to service club forums and to high schools.

This time, the students are preparing for final examinations and the service clubs are meeting less frequently because of holidays.

Many people are getting ready for vacations and will be heading out of town as soon as school is finished, cutting down not only on the number of rallies and forums but also leading observers to predict a low turnout at the polls.

The appearance of John Turner, finance minister, at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon at the Calgary Inn June 21 is expected to add some heat to the campaign.

A demonstration of oil and gas company employees, similar to the one which greeted Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, is in the works.



Toronto neighbors make it clear who they support

The Extremes in Vote Luring

Canadian Press

When Rocky Valentini decided to support the Progressive Conservative candidate in York Centre riding, he planned more than a small cardboard window sign.

Mr. Valentini, a Toronto barber, painted his entire house Conservative blue, and adorned it with huge red and white letters spelling out SWADRON, the name of the Conservative candidate.

Painting a house for an election might seem a little extreme, but a cross-Canada survey shows that it may be a lot easier—legally speaking—than posting two-foot by four-foot signs in some communities.

Restrictions on signs vary widely from town to town. For instance, in Regina, there are no regulations, but in Victoria and some o fthe Metropolitan Toronto boroughs bylaws govern when signs can be posted, their size and when they must be taken down.

About the only general rules across the country require permission from owners before signs are posted on private property and keeping sign posters away from utility poles and other public property.

Don Flemming, a Nova Scotia Power Corp. spokesman, said workmen have been injured by staples and nails used to tack posters to poles. The provincially-owned corporation has prohibited signs on its poles.

Similar rules are enforced by other power companies. But they except voters' lists and any other material necessary under the Canada Elections Act.

Aside from those rules, regulations vary so much that the national offices of the Liberal, Progressive Conservative and New Democrat parties have left signs and posters under control of provincial campaign committes, asking only that they observe local bylaws.

But the NDP also asks that "they use common sense and not shower a neighborhood with four-by-eight foot billboards."

On paper, the toughest regulations are in Vancouver where officially no signs are permitted on public or private property. But the rules are bent during election campaigns to allow posters.

The city asks politicians to restrict signs to private property and to remove them soon after the election. If the signs are not taken down, a warning is issued and, if necessary, city work crews remove the posters, sending bills to the parties.

"Every election, someone gets billed," a city spokesman said. "But it's no big deal."

In Victoria, campaign posters come under a temporary sign bylaw which requires a $1 permit, limits signs to less than 100 square feet in area and requires that they be taken down within 60 days after the permit is issued.

Campaign organizers in Toronto face a welter of regulations in the city's boroughs. The bylaws, which vary from borough to borough, regulate size o fsigns, say when they can be put up and taken down and provide fines of up to $1,000 for failure to comply.

In the borough of Etobicoke, an emergency crew is sent out after dark to take down signs on public property. There is no fine, but the candidate is informed of the infraction.

Politicians in Winnipeg have been fined in the past for ignoring a city bylaw prohibiting posting of campaign signs.

They had to pay court costs and the price of repainting damaged utility poles.

MONTREAL TOUGH

Montreal city council refuses permission to post signs on city property, or telephone and hydro poles. Signs on private property must be removed within 30 days after the election.

Most other Quebec towns and cities require permission from councils before signs or banners can be posted. Breaking the regulations can bring a maximum $100 fine.

In Edmonton, regulations prevent posting of signs on public property.

In Nova Scotia, campaign workers generally are free to post their literature at will. Aside from protecting private proverty rights and a prohibition against posters on utility poles, the only rules govern signs along highways.

No signs are permitted along freeways, but posters are allowed beside other highways provided they do not obstruct traffic signs.

Campaign signs can be posted on public property in St. John's, Nfld., with city council approval. Permission usually is granted if the signs do not interfere with traffic direction and public rights-of-way.

Politicians in Charlottetown must use cardboard or paper signs. Permission to use wooden billboards must be granted by the town planning commission.

Saint John, N.B., like Regina, has no regulations covering signs. But one country official in Saint John also left the door ajar on possible problems for the campaigners.

"No one would blame people if they tore this stuff down when they see it," he said.

Nutritional Plan Soon To Cabinet

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal cabinet will soon be studying an over-all plan to remedy the nation's nutritional ills, probably before the July 8 general election, says Dr. A. B. Morrison, assistant deputy minister of health.

His announcement follows the resignation last month of two federal nutrition experts. supposedly because of delays and disputes in planning a national nutrition program.

Dr. Z. I. Sabry, who co-ordinated the $2.5 million federal Nutrition Canada study, has already left his post, while Dr. Allan Forbes, director of the nutrition bureau since last year, resigned effective July 7.

Dr. Morrison, chief of the health protection branch which encompasses the nutrition bureau, discounted recent criticism of his department's nutrition program by Dr. Sabry.

The Nutrition Canada program is not on the verge of expiring and the nutrition bureau is not cutting staff, Dr. Morrison said in an interview.

He was commenting on statements by Dr. Sabry, who criticized the alleged failure of the government to deal with malnutrition when he spoke at the Canadain Dietetic Association conference this week in Toronto.

Dr. Morrison said he was not authorized to divutge details of the nutrition plan which is to go before the cabinet.

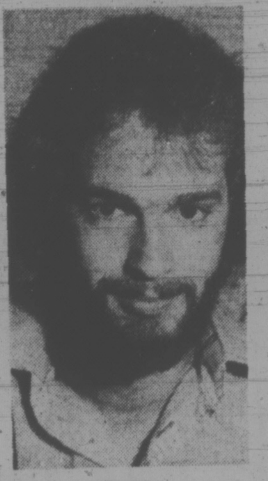
Man Saved In Dramatic City Rescue



STEEDS
. . . grabbed old man

An elderly man is alive today as a result of a dramatic rescue early this morning by a passenger in a taxi.

William Sutherland, believed in his 80s, was taken from his third-floor room in the Fairfield Hotel, 710 Cormorant, by Wayne Steeds, 21, of 784 West Gorge, after Steeds entered Sutherland's burning room.

Steeds said today he had called a cab while on the 900-block Douglas and had planned to go to a restaurant.

Steeds said that within moments of getting in a Bluebird cab, taxi driver Don Marnell spotted flames in one of the hotel's windows.

Marnell radioed for the fire department.

The pair continued down Douglas to the restaurant, then Steeds said: "We better turn around and see if we can do something back there.

"When we got back we both jumped out of the car, then Don boosted me up the fire escape and I climbed to the top."

Steeds kicked in a window.

"The smoke was really heavy and I couldn't breathe, so I backed off."

After being on the balcony for about 30 seconds, Steeds "just took a breath and went in."

He noticed a man standing in a corner, and "just grabbed him and threw him and myself out the door."

After telling Sutherland to go downstairs, Steeds set off the fire alarm, found an extinguisher, kicked down the door which had locked, and re-enered the room.

He used the extinguisher on an old cushion chair.

The flames were on the chair, walls and curtain.

Fire Insp. Alex Satchwell said Steeds saved Sutherland's life. Sutherland was unharmed.

Damage was estimated at $1,500 to the room and furniture.

After the fire was over Steeds went back to the restaurant and finally had something to eat.

Strike Restricts Hospital

KELOWNA (CP) — A study session by 288 members of the British Columbia Hospital Employees' Union at Kelowna General Hospital today effectively shut down most hospital services.

Union members walked off their jobs at 10:20 a.m. protesting what they say is an assault on one of their members by a hospital supervisor several weeks ago. No reason was given for the incident.

Ray McCready, BCHEU Okanagan-Kootenay regional servicing representative, said the unidentified union member required hospital treatment after being assaulted by an unnamed hospital supervisor.

Hospital administrator Colin Elliott said he will seek a court injunction ordering the union members back to work. He said the action by the BCHEU is illegal under the terms of the existing contract.

He immediately ordered restrictions on all surgery, cutting back on admissions except in emergency cases, and the release of patients who no longer required total hospital care.

He added that the dispute is a matter which should be handled through arbitration.

Arts Dean President

VANCOUVER (CP) — Douglas Kenny, 51, dean of arts at the Uniiversity of British Columbia, was appointed Wednesday to succeed retiring UBC president Walter Gage, 69.

Gage retires in July, 1975, after six years as president.

Kenny was picked by the UBC board of governors after three weeks' deliberation, from a list of candidates submitted by student-faculty committees.

He has signed a five-year contract at $60,000 a year.

A teacher at UBC since 1950, Kenny began his bachelor of arts degree at Victoria College in 1941 and completed it at UBC in 1945. He received a master's degree in psychology from UBC in 1947, and in 1952, was awarded a doctorate by the University of Washington while lecturing at UBC.

Teacher Ends 2-Week Vigil

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Teacher Ingrid Blanchet broke her fast and her two-week vigil on the legislature steps Wednesday night and today claimed a partial victory in her protest of bureaucracy and school board hiring practices.

Before leaving for her home in West Vancouver this morning, the 52-year-old kindergarten-primary teacher issued a typed statement saying Education Minister Eileen Dailly and B.C. Teachers' Federation president Jim McFarlan would look into her complaints.

"I feel I have accomplished something at least," she said.

The teacher completed her 14th day of protest on the steps of the legislature Wednesday and left at about 10 p.m. She claimed she had been discriminated against by school boards seeking kindergarten teachers while unwilling to pay the premium salaries required by high qualifications.

Mrs. Blanchet still has no offers of a teaching post in September and is considering returning to her last post in Prince Rupert which, she said, caused her mental anguish due to poor conditions.

"She mentioned she might have to go back," said her son Ian in West Vancouver, who expected his mother home this afternoon.

The teacher received a telegram from the Prince Rupert school board Tuesday instructing her to return or face action for breach of contract.

According to Mrs. Blanchet, she has a right to demand an inquiry by the BCTF into her allegations about hiring practices, but despite the implied assurance from McFarlan, she said in her statement: "I have had no success in being granted an inquiry into what I have stated was unethical practice having to do with tampering of principal's report on myself by a member of the Vancouver school board in 1972 when I resigned from that board."

'Common Destiny' For NATO

OTTAWA (WP) — The United States and its North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies — including France — Wednesday closed a stormy period in their postwar relations by adopting a 14-point declaration asserting their "common destiny."

U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, who set in motion a European-American dialogue in April 1973, said the U.S. was "satisfied" with the outcome. At an Ottawa press conference, Kissinger said that President Nixon would sign the declaration with other heads of government in Brussels next Wednesday in order to give it "an adequate solemnity."

The declaration itself was a comprise which fell short of Kissinger's proposed "new Atlantic Charter." But many here were pleased that any document was adopted at all given the angry conflicts that have married Atlantic unity since the Middle East war.

Many top NATO officials were ebullient after two days of discussions.

There were strong signs that the meeting had produced a new harmony between the Europeans and Americans on futher steps in the Middle East and in the

Fraser Flooding Near Emergency

By the Canadian Press

The Fraser River continued to rise Wednesday after increasing more than a foot since Tuesday, triggering emergency procedures in the lower mainland and Fraser Valley.

Flood reading was 21.04 feet above sea level at Mission Wednesday, up from 19.89 feet Tuesday.

Dike patrols began on both sides of the river and Chilliwack epened an emergency operations room.

Further measures will begin when the river tops 22 feet.

Several thousand acres of prime farm land and grazing land was under water at Clearwater, about 75 miles north of Kamloops, after the North Thompson River flooded its banks.

Most cattle were able to move to higher ground, but there were scattered areas where groups of cattle were marooned on small islands.

There were no evacuations, although some children had to be taken by boat to catch a morning school bus.

The Fraser continued to rise at Prince George, and water resource experts there predicted the river would continue to rise for another week before peaking for the year.

This means levels at Mission may increase for the next 10 days, although cooler weather predicted to arrive in two days in southern B.C. could slow runoff.

A major problem will come during the weekend when the coast is hit by tides of up to 15.6 feet. The tides, particularly if accompanied by westerly winds, can affect the Fraser River nearly as far as Chilliwack.

HYDRO GETS STRIKE NOTICE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Seventy-two-hour strike notice was served Wednesday on British Columbia Hydro by the Office and Technical Employees Union, Local 378, representing more than 2,300 whitecollar employees.

Union president Fred Trotter said the OTEU "is hopeful both parties will recognize their responsibility to the public and make every effort to arrive at a satisfactory agreement within the next 14 days."

NEWS BRIEFS

28 Fires in Alberta

EDMONTON (CP) — The 1,454 firefighters battling 28 forest fires in northern Alberta continued their work today in temperatures that were forecast to hit 85 degrees.

"They're really going at it," an Alberta Forest Service spokesman said of the firefighters. Some have been on the fire line, with only breaks for sleep and food, since a lightning storm swept the area Saturday night, igniting 57 fires.

Refinery Blast

ROTTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — An explosion and fire tore through the huge Royal Dutch-Shell refinery at Pernis today. First reports said five persons were injured. Damage was estimated at more than $1 million.

Highest Bank Rate

PARIS (AFP) — The Bank of France raised its bank rate today to 13 per cent from 11. The new rate compares with the British figure of 12¼ per cent, which is next highest.

Strike End Ordered

LISBON (AFP) — The postal workers trade union today ordered its 35,000 members to end a strike, which began three days ago, and return to work. The work stoppage is to back pay demands.

Mica Creek Fire

NELSON (CP) — About 44 men using six bulldozers battled forest fires in southeastern British Columbia Wednesday.

A spokesman for the British Columbia Forest Service said the largest fire of the 30 fires was in the Mica Creek area and covered 180 acres.

10-Pact Tie-Up Nearing End

Tentative agreement was reached by negotiators for B.C. contractors and a major bloc of unions early today.

The policy conference of the 10-pact group of unions which bargain jointly was meeting this afternoon in Vancouver and was expected to recommend acceptance to union members.

Ratification votes would likely take a week to be completed.

Locals of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners on Vancouver Island will vote on the policy conference's recommendation Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, said John Schibli, president of Victoria Local 1598.

The Victoria local of the carpenters union will meet Wednesday at 4:30 p.m. in the Union Centre, he said.

Cy Stairs, chief negotiator for the 10-pact, said nothing was signed but "there should be no problem."

Chuck Connaghan, president of Construction Labor Relations Association, representing 850 contractors, said there was "some movement" in the industry's last offer but he would not elaborate.

CIRA's last offer called for a wage and fringe benefit increase of $2.90 an hour in a two-year contract with 85 cents an hour as the first increment.

But a major point of contention was the 10-pact's proposal for a cost-of-living clause. CIRA had said the package offer was a sufficient hedge against inflation.

Six other unions bargaining with CIRA but separately from the 10-pact have reached settlements which include the $2.90 package and either $1 or $1.10 an hour as the first increment and a contract reopener after one year on the cost of living.

Only unions outside the 10-pact still to need agreements are the Vancouver and Kamloops locals of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the boilermakers union. The glaziers union is voting on a settlement now.

Vancouver electrical workers began a strike May 1 and the 10-pact followed a week later. Selective striking has occurred elsewhere in the province, including three Victoria building sites.

The 10-pact unions include carpenters and piledrivers, cement masons and plasterers, laborers, sheet metal workers and roofers, machinists, insulators, culinary workers, operating engineers, bricklayers, and painters.

IWA STILL PONDERING

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

Negotiators for the International Woodworkers of America failed Wednesday to reach agreement on whether to recommend acceptance or rejection of a contract offer the industry has termed "final."

Today, 48 hours after the offer was made, there was still no word from the IWA's coast negotiating committee, which was meeting in a Vancouver Hotel.

Although IWA regional president Jack Munro, chairman of the negotiating committee, called the offer "terrific," it was apparent that opinion was not shared by everyone.

The union called leaders of the nine coast locals to Vancouver to go over the contract offer with them and there was speculation the negotiating committee might approach Forest Industrial Relations, the industry's bargaining agency, to discuss 36 items.

The committee's dilemma grew from FIR's negotiating tactics, in which seven successive proposals were made, each one just a little bit better than the last one.

As one observer put it: "It's too much to turn down and not enough to accept. But how much more is there? And if we go out, it's going to be a real war."

Already, contrary to official

Caouette Cold On Controls

The Canadian Press

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette vowed Wednesday to vote against price and wage controls if the Progressive Conservatives are elected and his party holds the balance of power in Parliament after the July 8 election.

Caouette told reporters in Chicoutimi, Que., that controls will not stop inflation and Social Credit MPs will oppose any attempt to implement them.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield has called for a maximum 90-day freeze of prices and wages followed by 18 months to two years of lesser controls.

Details of the second phase of the plan would be worked out in consultation with industry, labor and business during the period when the freeze was in effect.

Caouette repeated his call for a 25-per-cent discount on all retail prices. Such a program could be financed by the Bank of Canada with subsidies paid to retailers. Retail prices would fall accordingly and consumer purchasing power would rise, he argued.

Stanfield, at a rally in Cranbrook, reiterated that controls are needed to break what he calls an inflation psychosis among Canadians.

In his remarks to the open-air crowd of about 300, he criticized resource industry taxation proposals announced in the defeated Liberal budget. If implemented, the tax changes would be bad for federalism because they would strain federal-provincial relations and leave resource industries caught in the crossfire, he said.

Later, at an outdoor evening rally in Calgary, Stanfield attacked the minority Liberal government for its handling of federal-provincial energy negotiatiions.

For months, he said, Prime Minister Trudeau followed a policy of confrontation with oil-producing provinces. He gave Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed a large measure of credit for the national oil-price agreement that was negotiated in March by Trudeau and provincial premiers.

The prime minister has cited the agreement repeatedly during the campaign as an example of strong leadership by his government.

David Lewis, New Democratic Party leader, campaigned Wednesday in Winnipeg where he defended his own anti-inflation policies at a news conference.

He said the NDP proposal of a two-price system for basic Canadian-produced commodities — one price at home and a higher price for experts — would give the consumers a much-needed break.

Canadians now are being hurt unfairly by inflated world prices because some companies are telling consumers to pay the higher international price or do without, he said.

Lewis said the two-price system, already in effect on wheat and oil, should be broadened to include lumber, steel, natural gas, fertilizer, newsprint and salmon.

Mine Men Here To Blast Bill 31

Prospectors, geologists and mining engineers arrived in Victoria today for the first stage of a hoped-for massive two-day demonstration against the Mineral Royalties Act.

Their arrival follows closely on the heels of the final debate of the bill in the legislature.

Bill 31 passed through committee stage approval late Wednesday afternoon, and with the last major legislative hurdle completed MLAs will likely give it official third reading approval today without further discussion.

Outside the legislature this morning security guards cleared the front driveway in expectation of the protesters while organizers for the demonstration were surveying the area.

Save Our Jobs Committee spokesman Bill Slewridge, a former mining union organizer and a member of the Majority Movement, said

Company Profits Climb 45.7%

OTTAWA (CP) — Industrial corporation profits after taxes climbed 45.7 per cent in the first quarter of 1974, substantially above totals recorded in the similar period for 1973, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

Combined with a rise in sales of 24 per cent, the figures indicate a significant average increase in profit margins of the companies.

The Statistics Canada figures show that actual estimated after-tax profits were $2.164 billion — an increase of $679 million over the first three months of 1973.

Sales during the first three months of 1974 jumped to a total of $41.8 billion, up $8.1 billion over the same period for 1973.

Similar figures for the first quarter of 1973 showed that corporate profits increased by 34 per cent over the first quarter of 1972. Profits for the first three months last year increased 53 per cent over the last quarter of 1972.

The rapid rise in corporate profits last year drew strong criticism from New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis and from labor unions. The new figures could revive that criticism, particularly in view of the federal election.

Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, campaigning in Winnipeg, said the figures indicated that "the atmosphere is appropriate for the period of controls we've been urging.

"These profit figures clearly indicate business is in a position to aborb increased costs during the freeze period we have in mind."

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Herb Gray had no comment on the figures as he entered a cabinet meeting today.

"Have you tried Mr. Turner," he said, referring to Finance Minister John Turner. Mr. Turner was not at the meeting.

The recent increases in profits came after a seven-per-cent decline in 1970 but industry has since made a strong recovery in its profit levels while expanding production.

Assets of the companies climbed to a total of about $120 billion, up 14.5 per cent over the same period in 1973. The Statistics Canada figures
